Salesman Spots Serious Sightseers By Such Stunts As Staring At Shoes

Washington. (ONTA) Homeowners always wear new shoes and persons who carry umbrellas are poor sightseers.

Not only that. Washingtonians are almost always in a hurry and pipemakers aren't very good sightseers either.

Those nuggets of incidental truth come from a highly successful practitioner of applied psychology, Edgar Mink. He's a super-quick-witted salesman.

Summer and winter, Mink stands on the same busy corner in downtown Washington and sells goods of the nation's capital to visitors. An inflexible method of distinguishing visitors, from residents, and then properly classifying them, is his key to a very profitable business. His average is one sale out of one hundred per cent "approaches." This fraction of an error occurs when a resident happens to pass by clauderling two or three out-of-towners.

Homeowners are his best customers. He claims he can spot them almost before they turn the corner. When he sees a couple holding hands he immediately looks at their feet. If they are both wearing new shoes, he says, "My home."

And the chances are they'll take his advice. $3.50 worth, which includes a private limousine ride of 30 miles to all the points of high interest and a bank ride up the Potomac.

"The young man's pocket will be full of money when his father gives him a 'wedding present,'" Mink explains, "and at that stage of married life they won't care how they spend it."

He says that there are many obvious signs which mark the visitor. "They'll amble along. When they come to a corner they will pause and look up and down the street before deciding which way to go. There's always the camera and map. And they will be scratched and freshly pressed."

- Provide deductions to farmers for members of family who contribute to revenue.
- Reduce income tax rates and increase exemptions.

PRICES

- Permanent floor price legislation based on these principles:
- A definite formula in the Farm Prices Support Act for arriving at floor prices.
- The formula will allow for variations in production and demand for individual products.
- Floor prices will be announced well in advance of production period.
- The floor price formula will be arrived at in consultation with representatives of producers.

EXPORT MARKETS

Restoration of the Canadian Wheat Board to serve its original purpose as a Marketing Agency for wheat producers . . . and its extension to include the handling of coarse grains.

Lone Gal Packs .22 Rifle Going West on Horseback, Refuels Horse, Self Here

Feasting briefly in Lindsay yesterday afternoon, "Miss Paul Reeves", complete with Western cap, 22 rifle and saddle-bags, is on her way to the wide open spaces of the west, and, she hopes, a degree in Veterinary Science.

Barbara Bradburn, a slight 21-year-old blonde of Montreal, B.C., is making the long trek from her native city to Vancouver in the hopes of entering Veterinary College in the State of Washington.

When asked where she planned to go, Barbara said that it would be to a farm wherever possible, with some being sent to the Youth Hostel chain where these are organized.

The trip has so far taken about three weeks, with stops in Ottawa, Kelowna, to visit friends and catch up on domestic chores such as laundry. From here the route swings northwest, and will probably be made partly by steamer to the head of the lake, then through the Prairie Provinces, arriving in Vancouver about the middle of August.

No serious mishaps have occurred so far, although Barbara has bolted twice, and is admittedly a little difficult to control in city traffic.

In addition to her interest in Veterinary science, Barbara is something of an amateur naturalist, and is looking forward to seeing Western species of birds.

It succeeded in entering the Washington College, Barbara intends to ship her rifle back east by rail, and if her application is not accepted, "Zazy" will have her railroad accommodations with her.

An extra bit of hay, please. Reason for Miss Bradburn's call in Lindsay was new horse feed that had managed to tear on her tight boot control footgear on the three week journey to Lindsay.

Mr. William Allen, a blacksmith at the post office, was called upon to repair fitting Zazy with the new feed advised Miss Bradburn to take.

It is a pity that the horse should be a scarcity of the special type in the little-travelled portions of the country.

Eisler Must Duck USA's Agents Now

Communist Oshart Eisler is here in Britain now, but when he moves out of the country, he may run into the agents of the United States to further trouble.

He admits he fears that the United States will keep trying to catch him. P. D. Ry first said—says he confirms this.

The Department admits that the British ruling is final. But a spokesman said that both the state and justice departments are seeking possible means to catch up with Eisler, who has been convicted in the States of contempt of Congress and perjury charges.

The British ruling that Eisler could not be extradited back to New York caused a hole in Washington. Some courtiers, speaking of Marshall Plan aid, accused the British Government of "negotiating".

But others thought the court had no choice but to hand down the decision it did.

Toronto, May 28 (UP)—Free legal aid may come as available to people in Ontario who cannot afford to pay costs of lawyers fees.

The Law Society of Upper Canada, has drawn up the frame work of an organization which will assist those persons in financial straits.

Some committee has been studying the plan for some time and says the plan will be brought into effect next year. However, if a business recession occurs, the Committee says the plan will be brought into effect immediately.

With most persons being unemployed, it seems few applications for legal aid.

Experts Doubt Widespread Claims for Vitamin E

NEW YORK (AP)—Many doctors—and the Food and Drug Administration—are getting worried about claims that are being made about Vitamin E. It is supposed to do for a wide variety of human ills.

In the past two or three years, Vitamin E has been described as a cure or partial cure for many kinds of heart and circulation disease, for a number of skin troubles, even, by faulty circulation— even for sugar diabetes.

The widespread of a growing number of physicians, after careful clinical study, is expressed by Dr. Emanuel Berez and William L. Hains of Jewish Hospital, Philadelphia, who wrote to the Journal of the American Medical Association in March:

"We believe that so much harm has resulted, and the public has been misled to so much money, that we should call attention to the adverse conclusions published concerning the use of vitamin E in heart disease."

Dr. Robert T. Stormont, medical director of the Food and Drug Administration, told AP Service: "We question any therapeutic (curative) claims made for any of the so-called vitamins, and vitamin E in cardiac (heart) disease indicates quite clearly that it is not of the slightest benefit. The clinical studies furnish quite conclusive evidence to the contrary to be based on what we regard as inadequate controlled studies."

"We are most skeptical of the alleged value of vitamin E in diabetes. There are well-controlled studies under way at the present time on this matter, and we hope to get a conclusive answer in the near future. In the meantime, it is our opinion that it would be quite definitely not in the public interest if diabetes were to rely on vitamin E, especially in view of the apparently neglectful treatment with insulin."

Five years after its discovery in 1922, vitamin E was regarded as the "fertility vitamin" or the "infertility vitamin." Most doctors long since have stopped prescribing it for this, but laymen still are buying it over the counter with the idea it will help them have children. Of this, Dr. Stormont says: "Although it has been demonstrated that vitamin E is necessary in the diet of the rat to insure successful reproduction, there seems to be general agreement that the vitamin is of no value in the treatment of sterility in the human. There is also fairly general agreement among recognized authorities that it is of no value in the treatment of habitual abortion in the human."

Truth of the publicity given vitamin E for heart, circulatory and skin, baffle troubles centers around Dr. Wilfrid E. Rhine, Dr. V. Shute, and Arthur Vogelzang of London, Ontario, who have reported remarkable results from Vitamin E in treating blood clots in the circulation, hardening of the ar-

Food and Drug Administration and Doctors Skeptical Over Its Value After Controlled Clinical Study

REPRIEVE FROM DEATH!

HEART DISEASE IS LAGGING UNCONTROLLED IN ALL OUR AGES GROUPS. BUT THE NEW SHUTE VITAMIN E THERAPY, PROPERLY ADMINISTERED, HAS GIVEN INCONTESTABLE PROOF THAT IT CAN HELP TO REPRIVE THIS SODORINE USING CONTROL.

London, Ontario, which sends out circulars headlined in this fashion. The doctors concluded that their experiments showed no basis for using vitamin E as a cure for heart disease, or for relief of heart pain. In experiments "conducted" differently, Dr. Milton E. Sloan of City Hospital, New York, did not find that vitamin E produced any subjective or objective improvements in heart cases or in diseases of the circulation of the legs. He reports in an article accepted for publication by the New York State Medical Journal, has some patients actually got worse during treatment "though not necessarily due to the treatment."

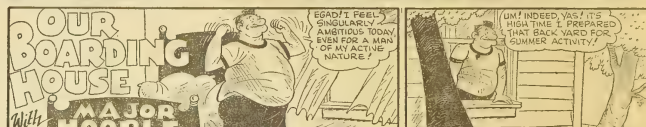

Dr. Berez and Hains told the conference that their tests with 30 patients showed no improvement if any. Dr. J. W. Martin and Kenneth H. Kain, of the Boston University School of Medicine, reported in the New England Journal of Medicine that only one of 11 patients showed "even slight objective benefit." Dr. Charles K. Downes and three associates at the Duke University school of Medicine studied seven patients with each of three types of heart disease, and reported that "no appreciable benefit" was found. Although vitamin E deficiency in rate and other animals supposedly causes the disease and other troubles involved in the controversy, most doctors doubt it is possible to create a vitamin E deficiency in a human being who eats natural food. That, they say, is because this vitamin is in so many of the common foods, and because the human body appears to have a marvelous ability to store up vitamin E over long periods.

At a two day International Conference on Vitamin E, sponsored recently by the New York Academy of Science, dozens of doctors and research specialists reported their findings. Many told of apparently helpful results obtained with vitamin E.

"These are the reports which Dr. Stormont felt were based on 'inadequately controlled studies.'" Dr. Stormont's statement was made after accepting a report on the conference from Dr. Leo O. Palmer, New York district medical officer.

The most nearly completely "controlled" clinical study reported at the conference was by Dr. Janet Travel of the Cornell University Medical School faculty, and four associates, all on the staff of Bath Israel Hospital, New York. They tested 38 victims of heart disease. Matching them for age, sex, duration and type of pain, they gave vitamin E to 19 and a matching placebo to 19. A placebo is a bread pill or anything that looks like medicine, makes the patient believe he is getting medicine, but actually contains no medicinal drugs.

One doctor gave the drug and placebo. The others, testing the patients "that who made the tests did not know which patients had vitamin E and which had placebo. Only one patient showed real im-

Cinderella from Coal Mines Becomes Mrs. Rockefeller

NEA Staff Correspondent
America is the land of opportunity. It's the place where a farm boy, rapt, hunchbacked man becomes president of the United States, where an Irish immigrant can become Mayor of New York and also where a coal miner's daughter can become Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller.

The life story of Jierste Pauliste, alias Eva Paul, alias Barbara, and even alias Bobo. And it's the story that countless Americans will undoubtedly feel quite as ambitious daughters, for years ago come or until some never Cinderella romance knocks the tale of the coal miner's daughter and the Rockefeller heir into pale, pink oblivion.

Not every girl could have done what Jierste Pauliste did, however. It took a goy head, a pleasing personality, a driving ambition and a handsome pair of legs to do it. Here of the piece was, of course, Winthrop Rockefeller, fourth of five sons of John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Win was tall, handsome and loud, and he went to Yale, then married around in the Texas oilfields. During the war, he saw action and was wounded on Okinawa.

THE NEWS WAS JUICY
He was, naturally, a prize catch. When an alert Florida newspaperman, in February, 1946, sending an application for a marriage license sent to Winthrop Rockefeller and Barbara, she, the Barry family in the world checked their offspring to see if they had one named Barbara.

A fashionable society columnist bursted out, to a passing public, that Barbara, States count of Main Line Philadelphia stock. The next day, the public planted wonder when they learned the truth about Barbara.

They heard the fascinating goings on about the coal miner's daughter who looking good in a bathing suit. They learned the juicy news of her modelling career and her stage appearances. They were told the gory but glorious details of the unfash-lonely walk-up apartment in New York with the cobble case in the hallway. Jierste Pauliste came of Lithuanian stock, he was born in the coal country of Nilesstown, Pa., which is on the main line of a railroad, but not of society. In 1934, her parents were divorced, and she and a younger sister went with mother to Chicago. Mother worked in a mattress factory married a carpenter named Peter Newkase and they lived in an apartment from which on a clear day, they could smell the stock yards.

In grammar school, Jierste sensibly Anglicized her first name to Eva. In high school, she figured she might as well do the thing right and changed her last name to Paul.

By 1938, her legs had begun to assert themselves, and she won the title of Miss Lithuanian for Lithuania Day at the Century of Progress fair. Popular and bright in high school, she was admitted to Northwestern University and studied there for a year and a half before her ambition drove her on toward the bright lights.

OUT OF THE CATALOGUE
She became a model, and if you consult some of your old Montgomery Ward catalogues, you'll find Eva Paul on quite a few pages. When she decided there was little future in that (except, possibly, graduating to Sears, Roebuck) she tied herself to New York.

She wanted to go on the stage—she couldn't make a Broadway show, but got a part playing Pearl in "Mousetrap Road" for a road company. The show went to Boston.

She met Richard Sears, Jr., of a Boston Hill family. They were married in 1941. She acquired the nicknames Bobo, and called herself Barbara about this time, and Dick and Bobo Sears became husbands of society she was very well liked by her in-laws, and quickly won admittance to the social register. They lived in Boston, Lee Lee, where where she did a few hit roles in films, and Paris, where Dick became third secretary in the United States embassy.

Bobo also lived in Reno, in October of 1947, where she was her divorce.

She came back to New York and lived in a walk-up on each Third Avenue with her sister. But she kept up her social contacts with the right people. One of these, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth (Liz) Whitney, invited her on a blind dinner date.

I KNEW I WAS GONE
"Whi," said Liz Whitney to the blind date, Winthrop Rockefeller. "I want you to meet a perfectly charming guy."

Rockefeller recalled later that "I saw her and I knew I was gone."

After a courtship, during which Rockefeller often called for her in his chauffeur-driven car on Third Avenue causing a minor stir among the other residents, they were married in the Palm Beach, Fla., estate of social polo player Winston Quisen on Feb. 13, 1948.

Barbara, the coal miner's daughter, sports a 1.1-carat, square cut diamond, set in platinum. Barbara, the coal miner's daughter, had, at her wedding, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, the Marquess of Blandford and several societies, polo players and polo ponies.

Barbara, the coal miner's daughter, had come a long way.

Cleveland, O.—What causes high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries and their allied heart diseases? This is the multi-million-dollar question which faces the American Foundation for High Blood Pressure. At a recent conference of the Foundation's medical advisers, 50 specialists in hypertension (high blood pressure) and cardio-vascular diseases met, wrapped notes, shook their heads and departed. They were generally agreed that the problem would require another million dollars this year, with still no promise of any cure.

But the medical brain-trust did furnish a few leads into the diseases which kill more than 600,000 Americans each year. Most striking of the new developments was a new technique of photographing the living heart and its surrounding arteries, without disturbing its normal function. This had never been done before. The process, described by Dr. Meyer Friedman of San Francisco, has been used successfully on animals in the past year. Through the use of cine-radiation, Dr. Friedman, Dr. Felix Perls and their associates hope to perfect the technique in another year for use on humans as a conclusive test for coronary disease.

"The value lies chiefly in diagnosis," said Dr. Friedman. "Today 50 per cent of coronary disease can be diagnosed only by the case history of the patient."

Far from announcing a cure for hypertension, several of the doctors tended to minimize the advantages of one highly-pollished treatment — the low-salt and rice diet.

Dr. William Golding of New York and his associates reported that patients on this diet for as long as 80 days showed no significant change in blood pressure level, and some suffered adverse effects on the function of the kidneys.

Dr. Henry A. Schroeder of the Washington University School of Medicine concentrated on the "psychosomatic" factor in hypertension — the relation of mental stress to high blood pressure. He said that two types of personalities are particularly prone to hypertension: the subnormal-inertive personality, of which the "mild man" might be termed representative, and the obsessive-compulsive type — the man with an "inner drive."

He outlined a theory in which mental disturbance is a key to hypertension. Briefly, mental or emotional stresses result in bodily tension, which in turn produces a reduced blood flow through the kidneys — a condition known as "ischemia."

The kidneys then develop a chemical substance which increases the blood pressure, strains the heart, speeds up hardening of the arteries, and contributes to kidney disease. Although the presence of this substance has been reported it is in such minute quantities that efforts to isolate and study it have failed.

TECHNIQUE of photographing coronary arteries, already successful with animals, will be tried on human volunteers by inserting flexible nylon tube (catheter) into artery at elbow or knee and pushing the tube through the artery to top of heart. Arteries of heart are then photographed as opaque fluid, pumped through tube, fills them.

Dr. Schroeder pointed out in defense of the psychosomatic theory that hypertension is a "civilized" ailment — African Zulus and Australian Bushmen don't get it. Yet among American businessmen and executives it is almost an occupational disease.

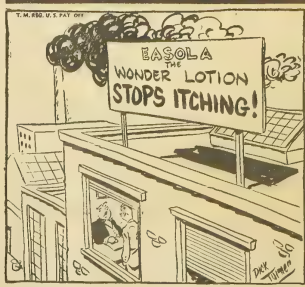

Despite the obvious psychological implications, Dr. Schroeder doesn't think that any widespread use of psychotherapy in the treatment of hypertension is in the offing, at least in advanced cases. He believes the defects in personality are too fundamental to be remedied on the psychiatrist's couch.

The doctors have returned to their laboratories for more testing, probing and compiling. But high blood pressure and accompanying diseases continue to take their toll, which predictions say will reach a million a year in the U.S. by 1960.

LIBERAL MEANS PROGRESS AND SECURITY FOR EVERYONE

PROMISES are always plentiful during election campaigns. But actions speak louder than words. Before you vote on June 27, consider well the past performances of all parties.

Down through the years, the Liberal party has brought into effect every worthwhile measure of social legislation now enjoyed by the people of Canada.

Many of these Liberal triumphs of social justice were won for the people against bitter Tory opposition.

Every one was achieved without endangering the democratic rights and freedom of the individual. Liberalism has brought social progress — without Socialism.

Far-sighted Liberal leadership has, in fact, built and strengthened the free enterprise system. Gross national production . . . retail sales . . . exports . . . every index of Canada's national economic health . . . has set new records. Employment in the past year passed even the peak of wartime levels. Wages are higher than ever before in history. Gross national income is three times what it was 10 years ago. Almost 2½ million more Canadians have bank accounts. Total savings of the people are over four billion dollars!

The record of the Liberal party is one of continuous progress. In the future, as in the past, Liberalism will bring you greater social security, prosperity and freedom than any other party.

Famous Newly-weds at English Derby

PRINCE ALY KHAN, wearing traditional Derby kit, and his bride, American RITA MAYWORTH, took over the field at Epsom Downs, England, as they started the running of the great English classic. The entire of Prince Aly and his father, the Aga Khan, were far back among the show-ups in the 32-horse Derby field led by Nibbler. Princess Rita created a sensation when she strided into the paddock. She was all smiles but showed little interest in the horses, spending most of the time keeping her big white, pink-dot hat stuck on her red hair.

"I believe in the Holy Spirit," and delivered a splendid sermon. The regular church choir furnished the music for this service, singing two Anthems.

If you have an idea then an inventor is a crazy old coot who lives on beans and water most of his life, kindly burn the idea from your mind.

Balding, brown-eyed American Sydney N. Barnich (Red-neck) has invented everything from the doorknob that makes him himself work to a non-pitching ear for women's airdies. And he's gotten checks for as much as $50,000 dollars for some of his brain waves. One of them - which we can't do for you because it's a patent - is older than the Russian government after the United States turned it down since, Syd says, the U.S.A. has been trying to catch up with his invention.

Sydney got into the inventing business some 40 years ago, when he was a New England school boy. The principal of his school has agreed a coily contract with an electrician to wire his building.

Barnich tried to tell the boss man that he was crazy to pay good money for that, but the fellow wouldn't listen. He Syd broke into the school that night, and did the wiring job and was shortly there, after out of school and an inventor more by accident than otherwise, because many of Sydney's gimmicks have been directed toward making life easy for Mrs. America. He says: "If I last 10 years longer, I'll have women's work reduced to such a degree that they don't have to get out of bed."

One of his latest items is expressly designed to keep Mama tucked away, even though baby gets a sudden fit of wailing. It's a crib that stays just like Mama's arms when she's rocking the kid to sleep. It's combined with a record player which plays any 12 number music best. You need a clock to give the little fellow the required rocking treatment - anything from 15 minutes to three hours. Then mom just turns over and does off. The rock-a-bye-cradler will be on the market this fall, at about $5 dollars.

Not long ago, Sydney noted that many women apply their lipstick as though their dressing room was the bottom of a well. He investigated, and found that the gals were, indeed, having a problem getting adequate lighting for their makeup job elsewhere than in their own boudoir.

He went down to his said-dishon office one morning and, by lunch time, had perfected a lip-stick case with mirror and flashlight attached so that a gal can make herself ready no matter where she stops to do the job.

Sydney moved, on to the kitchen to perfect a pressure cooker which won't blow Mama into the neighbor's back the first time she gets careless. Barnich's pressure cooker automatically turns off the heat when things get dangerous. He

I pay little attention to municipal politics - it's hard to mix with federal and municipal politics. Now last year I went into the polling booth to vote. I knew the candidates, I had an idea of the general views, but I did not know one single thing about the issues or their approach to them. I voted blindly - what value did my vote have? I was influencing a decision between a man I had no worth-while idea of.

New Names in the North

There's new activity in Ontario's bushland north of Lake Superior. Marathon and Red Rock, Terrace and Heron Bay: they all tell the same story. New towns have arisen, old ones expanded. Only five years ago on the site of Marathon, for example, there was nothing but bush; today a new community beside a new pulp mill is contributing millions to Canada's export trade.

Such spectacular developments in the north are matched by continuing industrial expansion in the older established communities. Throughout Canada today ever-widening avenues of opportunity await the enterprise of young Canadians.

With newspaper production 50% above pre-war levels, Canada today has an output five times that of any other country, and accounts for three out of every five news-paper pages in the world.

"Canada is a land of opportunity... There is a field for almost anything one can think of, and anyone with a willingness for hard work has a good chance of success," says David J. Smith, President of Horner Industries Limited, Windsor, Ontario.

Horner Industries Limited, which was founded in 1945, has in this short time earned remarkable records in the manufacture of chain saws and combustion engines. More than half the production of the plant reaches markets outside Canada. A staff of nearly a half dozen men in 1945, Horner Industries Limited has expanded to three plants in Canada, employing 395 workers.

Party Leadership Termed "Stupid"

(British United Press)
The Liberal Party opposed the election campaign in Blackpool, England, Monday night. The party came hot and fast almost as soon as members at dawn in their seats.

In strong terms sharply from the labor rank and file, John B. Worrall of Bradford denounced the party leadership for bringing out an unpopular budget only a few weeks before the recent local elections.

He denounced the party leadership as "stupid".

Worrall told the startled delegates that Labor's critics in the local elections was a "major disaster".

He harshly criticized the decision to de-capital campaign, saying it merely brought working class children of their own.

Worrall demanded: How can we expect to win local elections when the leadership does such stupid things on a National level?

On the platform as he spoke were many of the party's top level leaders—Prime Minister Clement Attlee, Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison, Health Minister Alexander Burnham, War Secretary Edmund Hillary, and Lord Harold Llewellyn.

"Some working class people," Worrall said, "are getting fed up with politicians that are in the position of infighting between marginals and power."

He criticized the use of a Royal appeal to advertise socialism, concluding with: "I suppose we shall soon have a deluge of Rula Hayworth and Alas Chalmers advertisement in the pages of a Socialist's International."

Says Labor's Return Visit To Stay Reds

The British Labor party's most vital convention in five years heard a ringing speech by Convention chairman, Wm. Moffat.

Offitine—who is Minister of National Insurance—said the return of the Labor Government to power in next year's general elections is important to Britain and the world, because it is Britain only which can bring about Communism.

As the first major speaker at the party convention, Moffat declared that he was sure the success of socialist industries was of supreme importance to the future of England and the world, and that was why the success of the Labor Party was the success of the world.

The convention—which will meet on the labor platform for the next three days—is the largest in the party's history, with nearly 10,000 members attending. The convention will have no doubt the strategy to meet the increasingly dangerous challenge from Winston Churchill's Conservatives.

Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin will fly from the Paris Conference to address the conference Thursday.

Fruit Trees Winter Well, Rain Needed

Ontario's mild winter was kind to fruit and vegetable crops.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture reports that all Ontario tree and small fruit plantations came through the winter in very satisfactory condition. The Department reports: "Absence of extended sub-zero temperatures and relatively light volume of snowfall combined to reduce freezing injury, rodent damage and snow breakage, except for mouse-grains in Michigan, Ohio, and Ontario."

However, the department says a sharp mid-April frost caused slight damage to pear and cherry buds in the Northern District. And in the general Post in the Niagara District shortly after blossom time in May caused damage which has not yet fully estimated.

Fruit and vegetable, like grain crops, are being affected by the current dry spell. And the weatherman has predicted little relief for the near future. (UPI)

McNevin Claims Subsidies Assisted Farmer, Nation

One of the striking things about the election campaign so far is that the opposition parties have not had a single word of criticism to direct at the massive subsidies by the Government of Canada during the war years and in the post-war period for the stabilization of agriculture and for the benefit of the farmers of this country. Bruce McNevin, Victoria British Columbia Liberal candidate, said this observation at Friday's rally in Lindsay.

"You may be very sure," he declared, "that there is a reason why the opposition parties are not dealing with the subject, and a very good reason. One. They know only too well that the moment they do they would be leading dangerous ground, because the farmers of this country are this province know only too well that because of the actions of the Liberal Government of Ontario, they are out of the war in a much improved position than what they entered before the war."

Mr. McNevin continued: "And I took for a few moments at the Liberal Convention the subject of the Liberal Government's policies and action for the benefit of our farmers here in Ontario. On the outbreak of the war in 1939, the Government of Canada realized that one of the contributions this country would make to the war effort was the production of that of helping to feed the people of the Allied Nations and the world in the war, as well as providing an adequate diet for the workers in the armaments plants at home. This was a job that had to be done by the farmers of Canada."

The government had to undertake a program of stabilization. Remembering the disastrous results of the extraction of food in prices in the first world war, the Liberal Government determined there would be no inflation in the second one, and it laid its plans accordingly."

"The chief problem the government faced, so far as agriculture was concerned, was that of ensuring the farmer of a sufficient return for his products, so that he would be able to produce the food that the nation of food."

"The manner in which the Liberal Government dealt with these price problems is directly responsible for the excellent position in which the farmers of Canada found themselves at the close of the war. There can be no disputing the fact that they were in a far better position then than in the years just before the war started. The figures of the cash farm income during the last year in Ontario established that fact beyond a doubt. In 1939, the cash farm income was $124,000,000. In 1940, the year before it had jumped to $129,000,000. In 1941, it was $134,000,000. In 1942, it was $140,000,000. In 1943, it was $146,000,000. In 1944, it was $151,000,000. ## Short Story

THE UGLY DUCKLING

By Maxine Mumford: BEN HUNTER had loved Lorraine Davis ever since the day when he had seen her in the playground. She was a beautiful girl, with long, wavy hair, and a sweet smile. He had never seen her before, but he had heard of her. She was the daughter of a wealthy family, and she was going to be married to a prince.

Ben had been the only one to see her, and he had been the only one to see her. He had been the only one to see her, and he had been the only one to see her. He had been the only one to see her, and he had been the only one to see her.

"That's why I want him," Ben had said to his mother. "He's the only one who knows me. He's the only one who knows me. He's the only one who knows me. He's the only one who knows me."

"You're not getting any younger," Ben's mother had said. "You're not getting any younger. You're not getting any younger. You're not getting any younger. You're not getting any younger."

"That's why I want him," Ben had said to his mother. "He's the only one who knows me. He's the only one who knows me. He's the only one who knows me. He's the only one who knows me."

THE UGLY DUCKLING

By Maxine Mumford

BEN HUNTER had loved Lorraine Davis ever since the day when he had seen her in the playground. She was a beautiful girl, with long, wavy hair, and a sweet smile. He had never seen her before, but he had heard of her. She was the daughter of a wealthy family, and she was going to be married to a prince.

Ben had been the only one to see her, and he had been the only one to see her. He had been the only one to see her, and he had been the only one to see her. He had been the only one to see her, and he had been the only one to see her.

"That's why I want him," Ben had said to his mother. "He's the only one who knows me. He's the only one who knows me. He's the only one who knows me. He's the only one who knows me."

Junior Helps Crack Junior 'Shakedown'

By NEA Service
Cleveland, O. — (NEA) — When you're just an eight-year-old boy and a couple of toughs in your class at school demand protection money, it seems you're a little...

From the movie, you know this is a "shakedown." Only this isn't like the movies at all. This is the sort of thing that supposedly happens only to grown-ups, and you don't know how to handle it. You don't want to tell your dad that the... are bigger, stronger than you. You don't want to give away... school a day. You don't want... beat up for not paying it.

So you stay away from school. That's how it was with Donald Phillips, eight, a student in the third grade at St. Clair School, Cleveland.

But things look a lot brighter now. That's because Donald is helping other break up a juvenile "shakedown" racket at his school, a situation that began with the visit of two juvenile bureau policemen to Donald's home.

Their visit came after Donald balked at attending classes, and after a trustee officer talked with the boys' father.

The trustee officer thought Donald might be a victim of a "protection" job, which flared recently at the school. The father had a man-to-man talk with Donald, and the boy's story came tumbling out.

"There are three big boys who pay on Friday. The two boys, he says to the juvenile bureau. He is my room. When teacher leaves told his dad, promised him a beat-up on the following Monday if he didn't pay his way out of it. So he didn't go to school."

"We got a lot of these reports, the protection racket in schools," said Capt. Arthur Roth, head of the bureau. "It comes in spillover, though, another five cents' worth of protection two days later, gave up a nickel."

Thursday had no more money to police, and Donald repeated his story. The movie would be my guess.

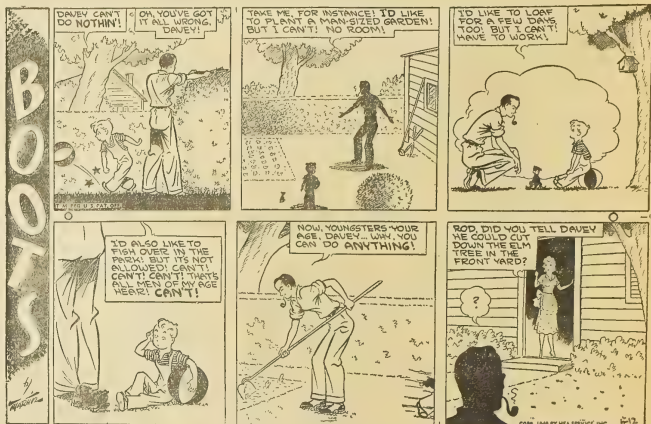

DONALD AND DETECTIVES. At first the toughs looked bigger.

CANADIAN FASHIONS — At left, smartly simple dress in sheer tulle with delicate fagoting on bodice. Centre, basically slim silhouette achieves grace and motion in pleats, swaying gracefully over skirt of this trend-setting dress. It adds high fashion note in use of buttons at back of skirt and repeating them on front of bodice for subtle flattery. Right, a dark dramatic sheen with collar evokes movie suggestions of cape. Note important detail in skirt with round hem and pocket.

They were... crowd of 2,000 broke up the meeting of 2,000 Red, several of whom were jailed for disturbing the peace. It took police two hours to disperse the crowd.

EDWARD'S LOVE FOR WALLIS SHOOK AN EMPIRE

Addiction Climaxed One of History's Most Unbelievable Romances

By RICHARD KLEINER

NEA Staff Correspondent

Play a little soft and sentimental music, Ma'am, while we relive one of history's most unbelievable romances.

The love of Edward (in the Grace of God King of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith, Ruler of India) for Wallis Warfield shook an empire almost overnight, a government that gave the world a few breathless, jittery days in short. It was a humdinger of a story.

A former American was fighting the big defeat of the depression in the mid-1930s when it began to perk up under the stroke of rumors about the King and the Divorcee. Edward was fighting the big defeat of the depression in the mid-1930s when it began to perk up under the stroke of rumors about the King and the Divorcee.

Rumors about the divorcee were and-in some ways, were not. In the first place, Edward was not the kind of man who would be so easily swayed by a woman. He was a man of great character and a great deal of sense. He was a man who would not be so easily swayed by a woman. He was a man of great character and a great deal of sense.

In Memoriam

WATTS—In loving memory of my dear sister, Mabel, who passed away January 13, 1947.

She lives beyond the shadows. Dwellers a sweet sister in mine. Whom I loved as a treasure. Whom I cherished as divine. God called the one I loved away. Forgive me, dear Mabel, no I never will.

As years roll on I miss you still. The years were great, the shock severe. I still thought the end was near. It's only those who have lost him that tell.

The sorrow of parting without farewell. But God is good. He gives me strength. To bear my bitter cross. He is the only one to know. How bitter is my loss.

—Sadly missed by loving sister Alice, of Huntsville, Ont. (80181)

In Memoriam

MELACHLAN - In loving memory of my dear mother, Elizabeth Jane, who passed away June 21, 1948.

She has taken her last journey In God's beautiful ship called "Rest"

Away from this world of sorrow To a home of eternal rest. Words cannot say how I loved her Deep in my heart there's a pain God alone knows how I miss her As I wonder along life's lane

But a voice seems gently calling Dear one be good and true And at the end of life's pathway I'll be watching and waiting for you.

Sadly missed by her daughter Mary. (7395)

TWO BURN WHEN NEW BUILDING COLLAPSES: New York, June 15 (AP) - A building under construction near Central Park collapsed this afternoon. Police report 20 people are hurt. "The father was smooth as was until Henry mentioned two hundred dollars. The guy smiled something about the old bird mistaking. The balance was four hundred. 'Okay, you want blood money,' Henry said. 'Then the guy got a month full of it and the ring too. By that time they were all in the trap. He said, 'Oh dear, and he's lost the bird,' Helen said."

ON JUNE 27th, the people of Canada will elect a new Parliament. The party that wins a majority in that Parliament will form the new Government, with its leader as Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister will then appoint his Cabinet of Ministers. Each Minister will be responsible for an important phase of our nation's life and destiny.

Canada needs a strong, experienced Cabinet of Ministers for the uncertain years ahead. The only party that can give such sound leadership is the Liberal party. It has a tried and trained crew of administrators, ready for the big job of building a better, more prosperous Canada.

The Liberal cabinet is a well-balanced fusion of mature experience and youthful, capable, vigorous drive. It contains men from every region in Canada — men from farms, from the ranks of labour, from the professions, and from business.

No other party could produce such a truly all-Canadian cabinet... representing all classes... all creeds... all provinces.

When you vote, remember — Canada needs the smooth-working, experienced Liberal cabinet — NOT a headstrong "one-man band", beating a tune called by forces outside of Parliament — NOT a group of starry-eyed theorists eager to make Socialistic guinea pigs of 13,000,000 Canadians... including you.

Vote LIBERAL for the kind of leadership that has made Canada prosperous... and can make it more prosperous still.

Baseball

Walkovers are now on top of the heap in the eastern group of the season with the Wilby Red-Wings if the locals can pull a win out of the bag it would make the win and loss column even with four and four, with such hangers as Louks, McTaggart, and Thompson on the team they should be in there.

Lakeshore Baseball

Tonight the Lindsay Lakeshore team to Wilby for their first game of the season with the Wilby Red-Wings. If the locals can pull a win out of the bag it would make the win and loss column even with four and four, with such hangers as Louks, McTaggart, and Thompson on the team they should be in there.

Lox McTaggart

Word has just been received that Lou McTaggart is the property of the Lindsay Lakeshore. So there will be more money here. It would be tough to miss, big Lou who is a natural ball player, being able to play almost any position, and he is the leading hitter on the Lindsay team.

BREAKER LEO

Murry Sweetman, Zeno-McTaggart player, had a stroke of bad luck Monday while playing at Valerita. He felt breaking his leg and was ripped the young link hunk of scrap.

Baseball

For the first three years after the war, the supply of scrap was critically short. Steel production, tied directly to scrap supply, was short. But now scrap yards like Pei-apo are in full production, and the steel mills are turning the scrap into tanks and ships into such scrap yards.

Relics of Scrap With Japs and Nazis Turned Into Useful Peacetime Scrap

By RICHARD KLEINER

NEA Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, MD. (NEA)—An army of men with easy-looking faces is accomplishing what Japanese drive-borders and Nazi soldiers tried to do and couldn't—turn scrap into useful peacetime steel.

In the historic Patagonia River, where once Francis Scott Key watched the British bombard Fort Mifflin, a steady stream of melted metal—everything from broken up to scrap steel to feed peacetime steel furnaces.

One of the ships at the Patagonia River is the light cruiser Memphis, which once took President Roosevelt to the Canadian conference. Others are the Detroit, a survivor of Pearl Harbor, and the Richmond and Concord which, like the Detroit, are veterans of the Pacific battle.

There's the HMS Bantock, which chased the German pocket battleship Von Tirpitz along the Norwegian coast.

And there are seven two-hundred-ton ships which once plied the waters between Staten Island and Manhattan, in New York Bay.

During the war, this yard was the site of the Bush-Brown-Fairfield shipyard, where more than 140 Liberty and Victory ships and LSTs were built. Now the process is reversed, and the workmen are ripping the young link hunk of scrap.

Besides ships, there are acres of obsolete tanks, several thousand of them piled outside the high walls. Many still have caked mud from rain-drenched battlefields; others have shell holes. A few have blood stains. There are enemy tanks, too, since the steel furnaces know no nationality.

For the first three years after the war, the supply of scrap was critically short. Steel production, tied directly to scrap supply, was short. But now scrap yards like Pei-apo are in full production, and the steel mills are turning the scrap into tanks and ships into such scrap yards.

Shipwrecking, as the reduction of ships into scrap is called, is a highly skilled task requiring careful planning and good judgment by the supervisor and his crew. The vessel warped to a pier, is worked over by men armed with torches, hammers, sledge and cold chisels.

First to come down is the radio aerial, permitting the big crane to slide over the ship. Then, bit by bit, metals and superstructure are removed, ends torn away and the interior fillings taken out. The work proceeds cautiously, lest the ship become unbalanced and capsize when the vessel has been reduced to a watertight hull. It is drawn up on shore.

Go After 50 More Houses

More low rental housing to be being sought for Lindsay by Lindsay's Council. Following a second discussion of the matter this week, Council has decided to consult with the boards of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation so that what can be done.

The figures 30, 40, and 50 were mentioned during the talks. After being the number of houses desired and 30 and 50 the amounts in the thousands which Council thought the houses should rent for. "Low rental" houses were favored by all and the type of unit they are going to go to.

Mr. Ferguson lead off the discussion saying he was "not satisfied that there was enough houses being built in Lindsay to take care of the future needs." He cited the "30, 40, and 50" in the past word as requiring houses for his personal.

But Mr. Butler didn't think many more houses were going to be available to the large factory Mr. Ferguson referred to, pointing out that a good many more houses were going to be required for rental houses.

Shorter Hours, More Meetings For Council

Lindsay's Council agreed to have shorter hours from now on. This was decided by members Mon. p.m. and 7:30 p.m. The amount in the past word as requiring houses for his personal.

Faces Charges of Intimidating

(British United Press) — In St. John's Newfoundland — Premier Joseph Smallwood has been ordered to appear in the St. John's Magistrate Court Thursday on charges of intimidating voters.

The order appeared in four summons issued Monday against the premier.

They were taken out by the Progressive Conservative candidate for St. John's West, W. J. Brown. Brown alleged that Smallwood intimidated voters of the Ferryland riding by telling them that no public money would be spent in Ferryland unless the people voted Liberal.

"I don't think the circumstances in this case justify warrants. I will get a writ now," said the judge.

In Ottawa, opposition leader George Drew had challenged Prime Minister St. Laurent to assure Newfoundlanders that there'll be no intimidation of voters.

Drew said last night that Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland had made "cold calculated" attempts to control voters who might refuse to cast their ballots for the Liberals.

Drew said a report by St. John's Sunday Herald of speeches by Smallwood in which the Newfoundland premier was quoted as saying to the voters of Ferryland: "You have turned me down three times. I am not going to stop of the public purse and not one cent will come out for Ferryland unless you vote Liberal."

Mr. Smallwood refused to comment on the case.

He says he has no intention of making any comment until I have authoritative evidence to say what Premier Smallwood actually did say.

Cummins Appointed As Manager

Mr. Harry Campbell, chairman of the commission, says he expects Mr. Cummings will be in Lindsay in a day. "I'm anxious time to make over Mr. Campbell is highly pleased with the choice which he said was unanimous among members of the commission. "We feel we have made a good choice and that Bill Cummings will do a good job for us," he stated.

The three officers, Sergeant William Kelso and constables Joseph O'Rourke and John Payne, were charged with assaulting Douglas Colmie.

charges were laid by Chief Commissioner John Chisholm on instructions from the Toronto Police Commission. The Commission investigated the affair when the Ontario Supreme Court granted an appeal by Tolmie and criticized the police force.

But Magistrate T. S. Elmore ruled in favour of the police officers. When so-called damages were launched against the officers by Tolmie it will be before the courts, RHP.

It was hot in the tent and there was plenty of brow-mopping to be done but no one seemed to mind this particularly, too as they were in the excitement of the show which kept three rings in progress throughout the two-hour-long circus.

If after the main show was over fans still hadn't seen enough there was a thrilling one-man rodeo featuring "The Texas Kid" riding and roping wild Texas horses.

Here's a fish story from Johannesburg, South Africa, about the lady ... not the fish ... that got away. What amazes the experts is that the lady got away with her life.

Mrs. J. A. Agar was fishing from a small boat when she felt a nibble on her line. She was a "shore-out" fisher, and she was a "shore-out" fisher.

As all good horses were and was answered by a furious tugging — then a tremendous splash and a bewailing of pain.

A huge hippopotamus emerged — its nostrils capable of drawing in the boat's pieces if annoyed enough. And the hippo was certainly mad. But fortunately for Mrs. Agar the line fouled and broke.

While the beast was untangling its nostrils, Mrs. Agar was beating all sailing records on her way to the upper reaches.

Cattle Run Is Season's Heaviest!

Toronto, June 13 (BUP) — Officials at the Toronto Livestock Market say that the run of cattle this morning was the heaviest for any Monday so far this year. More than 45-hundred head of cattle were received.

The sudden rush is attributed to droughts now withering Ontario's pasture lands. Farmers have been shipping their cattle to market before the lack of good fodder could affect their value.

The Lindsay farm market Saturday was by far the best for some time. A greater supply of garden produce was offered, and citizens turned out in large numbers, buying out the entire supply in short order.

Eggs took a jump of 5 cents dozen over last week, and this rise is in accord with the rising price of corn across the country.

Asparagus went for 15 cents per bunch, while potatoes at 30 cents for a six-quart basket. Eggs, Grade A large, 50 cents per doz., with mediums at 45 cents per lb. # Extra Feeding as Harvest Nears Gives Super Yield

When garden plants begin to flower, get fruit, or reach harvest size, extra feeding is necessary to insure a high yield, says a horticulturist. Plants will grow larger, and colors more brilliant, and the yield will increase. Extra feeding will give plants more vigor and improve the quality of the fruit. In the flower garden, from a cupful to a quart of the liquid may be applied to each plant, depending upon its size. This liquid should not be applied to the leaves, only to the soil. ## THE FULFILL

By Eugene M. Hanson

"I've seen the ocean of the world and most of its cities," said a corporal. "I was a sailor on merchant ships for fifteen years before the war. I have seen the native customs in nearly every land and I can express myself in seven languages. I've seen the banners of the Orient where slave girls are sold and I have seen the castles where great heroes ruled in Europe. If I had my life to live over, I'd be a sailor again. It's been a full life."

A cluster of soldiers relaxed in a thousand-year-old village. They were close to death. For the moment the past seemed more important than the future. Spoke up another corporal. "I can't say I'm familiar with natives, but I know all the historic landmarks of the civilized world. I was a teacher and able to travel three months every year. The rest of the year I had time to study the languages of the world. I could have lived a life of pleasure, but I couldn't say I'm bothered."

Next spoke the newspaper man. "It has been my privilege," he said, "to meet the most important persons ever to visit the city in which I was a reporter. On the other hand, I have known criminals, thieves and unfortunates of all kinds. I have seen how people live in all walks of life. I wouldn't want anything better than to get back my peace and continue where I left off when I joined the army."

"I've seen life even more intimately than any of you," declared the doctor. "Life at its very beginning. I have entered homes and viewed the naked emotions of my neighbors. Young brides tell me their problems. Old men, their fears. I have seen strong men grow weak, and have helped weak men become strong. My profession has given me rewards which make me feel one of the luckiest of men."

"I've seen things from a different angle," said the engineer. "My career has made me see more in the forces of nature than in the doings of man. I've seen the simple, the desert, the towering mountains, great rivers dammed, and bridges. I've seen things that I have never seen before. I've seen things that I have never seen before. I've seen things that I have never seen before. I've seen things that I have never seen before."

"I've seen things that I have never seen before," said the man in the uniform. "I've seen things that I have never seen before. I've seen things that I have never seen before. I've seen things that I have never seen before. I've seen things that I have never seen before. I've seen things that I have never seen before."

Obituary

W. A. (ABE) PERREAU

There's an open Gate at the end of the road.

Through which each must go alone And there is light which we cannot see.

Our Father claims His own. Beyond this gate our loved ones find Happiness and rest.

And there is comfort in the thought That a loving God knows best.

The late ABE PERREAU passed peacefully away on Thursday, May 30, at the Rose Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, to which he had been moved a couple of days previously, from the home at Chertsey, Ont.

Although not in the best of health for some time, he had been up and about as usual, until he was confined to bed after a stroke occurring some three weeks ago.

Mr. Perreau moved to Valentia 19 years ago, where he settled on the farm of his daughter, Cora, after the death of his wife, Abigail Perreau, on November 3, 1946. He and his family moved to Chertsey, where they farmed.

He was a kind and generous friend and neighbour, ready to lend a helping hand to every one. He always enjoyed company and visitors were sure to find a ready welcome at his home. His kindness and friendly disposition gained for him a wide circle of friends, which was shown by the large crowd who gathered to pay their last respects to the deceased.

His pastor, Rev. Mr. McKean, in words of comfort to those who grieved the death of a dear father and brother, he raised his remarks on the words, "Forasmuch as we are dust, and to dust we shall return."

Funeral services were held at the chapel of John Anderson, Lindsay, on Saturday, May 31, at 10 o'clock, with burial in the cemetery.

The remains were laid to rest in the family plot, Valentia Cemetery.

The sympathy of the community goes out to the bereaved family.

The secretary, Mrs. Wessell read a communication re the United Nations Appeal for Children. It was decided to take a collection for the cause at the next meeting.

The annual district meeting was discussed and plans made to attend the meeting to be held at Woodville. A letter from the Department was read, relating the essential qualities of the ideal W. M. B.

Mrs. V. Webster rendered a solo, which was well received.

Mrs. Chris. Linn gave a splendid solo on "Benedictus," stressing that health is the first essential. Short messages were given by Mrs. W. Morrison, Mrs. V. Webster, Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. C. McKean, who is interesting content was held by Mrs. Morrison.

Current events which were a feature of every meeting were brief, reviewed by Miss M. Currie.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem and Grace, after which lunch was served by the hostess and the committee.

Q. How can I make a good trouble solution?

A. Mix four ounces of lactic acid one ounce of glycerine, and one ounce of rosewater. Or, try rubbing the juice of one lemon in half a cup of water and applying twice daily.

THIS IS A FAMILY AFFAIR

YOUR FUTURE . . . AND CANADA'S

Conditions have been good the last few years. More people are working than ever before — making more, spending more, saving more.

Isn't that what you want? After all, you have a family to think about . . . and you are planning for their future . . .

The Liberals are planning and working for your family's future too.

Here are some of the things the Liberals are doing:

Family Allowances are increased. Already a billion dollars has been spent in Canada on family allowances. Millions of boys and girls are better clothed, fed and housed — have a better chance for an education and a real start in life — because of this Liberal measure. It has brought new initiative and well-being to new countless Canadian homes.

Old Age Pensions and pensions for the blind have been steadily increased with dramatic results. More homes have been built in Canada, in relation to population, than in any nation. Already a million Canadians live in homes built since the war. The Liberal government is ready to help solve the low-rental housing problem and has offered its cooperation to provinces and municipalities.

These are all part of the Liberal program of social betterment . . . a program to achieve a "national standard of satisfactory living conditions" where everyone will share the good life.

Then, there is the Liberal health program. Already federal grants are helping the provinces to improve their health services. But the Liberals' aim is a nationwide equitable health insurance system, to protect everyone, the tragedy of inadequate health care and the financial strain of lengthy illness.

THIS CAN BE THE DAWN OF OUR GREATEST DAY!

Canadians have never willingly elected to power a government which has failed to remain faithful to the democratic principle of free enterprise. By their insistence on retaining emergency powers granted for war only, the Liberals have confused and frustrated every branch of our economy by a mass of ever-changing orders and regulations. Canada's future, your own future and the future of your children hang in the balance. On June 27th, vote for the Progressive Conservative Party which will insist on government being the servant of the people—not the master!

Rendezvous In Normandy:

Gerry Tierney, Civilian, Keeps a Date
With Lieut. Tierney and a Nazi Ambush

Anfrville, Normandy — (NEA) — Gerry Tierney of Hicksville, N. Y., civilian, walked down a dirt road in Normandy toward a rendezvous with his past.

His heart began to pound a little faster as he turned off the main road from Anfrville and started down a path between twin rows of trees. A couple of house-comes chased up and down his spine.

This was familiar. "This was getting close to the spot where this war," OT would always know as "the turning point in my life." Last thousands of soldiers, sailors and marines, Gerry had nursed a hope that he might come back to a place he had known when there was thunder in the sky and the smell of gunpowder in the air and the whine of bullets in the hedgerows.

Today he was three-five years later. And every step made it more familiar. His eye caught a glimpse of rubble in a hollow between bushes and he was aware of its intrusion.

A spatter of bullets flashed themselves against the sides of Lt. Gerald M. Tierney's armored scout car as it rolled down a shaded aisle of trees. Tierney rapped an order to the turret gunner and a part of the turret came out. 39 and 30 rather machine guns came into the line. The turret had fired from a fossile between two trees.

The armored car rolled on and behind it came the balance of the 16th Reconnaissance troop, two more armored cars and three mounting machine guns.

It was D plus 6 and Tierney's troop was probing more than a mile inside the German lines. This was "Indian country" and the two Krauts might be on hidden listening positions or the occupants of stronger forces. That was his job to find out.

Tierney halted and gave the order to conceal vehicles and proceed on foot. He hopped himself stiffly out of the scout car.

Came a sound like a metallic Bronx cheer and Tierney spun to his tracks. Bounced six feet backward into the dust of the road. He felt like he'd been hit by a baseball bat. He was perfectly conscious and he knew that sound. It was the ugly "buzz" of the German Sten gunner machine pistol. Three steps had torn through the right side of his body.

He heard his own turret fire back and heard the throaty death scream of the German.

He fought to his feet and grasped the mine brackets on the side of his car, grinding his teeth against

Beachhead Revisited: Hulks That Litter 'Utah' Stir Memory Of Returning D-Day Newsmen

By ROY LEWIS
NEA Staff Correspondent

Utah Beach, Normandy — (UFA) — Utah, rustling hulks project from the sands across which the U. S. 6th, 4th and 3rd Divisions fought five years ago on D-Day.

They are scarcely recognizable today as landing ships, tanks and tanks. The japing of the surf carries no echo of the battle for the beachhead. The air is sweet, without a hint of cordite.

There are those in this party of American correspondents, who flew here in American Overseas Airlines' Operation Beachhead Revisited, who can say: "I stood right here" or "The plane landed behind the beach with an 88 in that blockhouse."

But these are behind, far-away memories of another age, when these well-grounded newspapermen in variously colored business suits wore the Army khaki, washed in their tin hats like doughboys and ate cold C rations with their fingers.

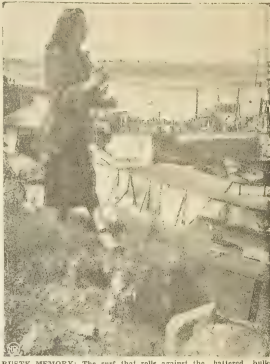

Today they are tourists: five years ago they belonged here. They were here then as part of the most complicated war news coverage ever seen. The stories they wrote and the pictures they took told the people on the home front the shape and the sound and smell of war.

They got tired and dirty and stared just like the brown women behind their cameras. "They went on one river bank behind the beach and followed the troops through places like Montebourg and Carment and St. Lo — past Paris and the Seine — past a place called the Bulge Siegfried Line."

Through them the home folks learned in Galesville, Wis., how Staff Sgt. Warren Snider exposed himself to German guns for an hour to help the mortar boys plaster the Nazis in Pont l'Évêque, or in Falaise, Calv., how Col. Tom Dobbie, under constant fire from 88's, laid a telephone line 500 yards across a bridge repaired in four times and finally relaid it waist deep in water to prevent it being shot off.

... they had seen thousand other stories of individual and collective gallantry, guts and humor.

The Army gave the correspondents. Sometimes a correspondent pres-

Wright Bryan of the Atlanta Journal, a member of this party, these camps — often numbering 200 to 300 correspondents, editors, drivers, mechanics, cooks, guards and censors — settled down for a few days to a few weeks in castle, school-house, convent or under canvas.

Each day the correspondents would fan out by jeep toward the front lines to get their news; at night they'd run back to be posted out their stories or dispatch their pictures. Censors travelled with every forward press camp and they could be as fussy as any rear-echelon blue-pencil and chatty artist.

BUSHMAN AND PROFILE: The Then, in 1918, the girls noted in their morning paper that Francis K. Bushman was marrying his pretty, brown-eyed co-star, Beverly Bayne. Their first reaction was disappointment at not being the chosen party, but it turned to rage, when, a few paragraphs down, they noted, in cold, heartless type, that in order to be married, Francis divorced his wife of 18 years and five kids.

They were bitter at the deception. Within a few weeks, 17 of the 18 secretaries were fired, their services no longer required as the fan mail fell to a trickle. Box office receipts tumbled rapidly.

Bushman made one more picture, and he wasn't even the hero. He played the heavy to Ramon Novarro's hero in the famous "Ben Hur." Beverly Bayne, who had come up to her pinnacle after long years in vaudeville and on the stage, suffered, too. Her fan mail and other popularity indicators fell with a bang.

Mr. and Mrs. Bushman left Hollywood, and toured the vaudeville circuits. The populace was still willing to shell out for tickets to see the erstwhile leading lights of Hollywood in person. But, on the screen, they were soon swooning over a fellow named Rudolph Valentino.

Black Tom case. After 10 years of brilliant work on that case, involving the most complicated kind of litigation before international and foreign courts, he finally won victory for his client by proving German espionage responsible for the explosion of a shipload of ammunition in the New York harbor in 1916. The case involved $20,000,000 settlement.

McCloy's cool navigating through the morass of intrigue and counter espionage that surrounded the Black Tom case won the admiration of Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War.

While most of it was going on when Stimson became Secretary of War in 1940, with specific instructions to bolster America's counter-sabotage activities, he called on Meade to help him. From 1941 to 1946 as Assistant Secretary of War, Meade directed that job as well as acting as "eyes, ears and head" of Once, during the early fighting in Africa, McCloy arrived at the front simultaneously with the first shipment of bazookas to the troops. There were no instructions on how to use the radically new weapons, but it happened that McCloy had made it his business to learn how to fire them when the first model had been tested back in the States.

He put on an impromptu demonstration which enabled some of the troops to start using the bazooka immediately. One of the soldiers was taught in that first demonstration later won the Congressional Medal of Honor with the weapon.

When McGloay left the government in 1945, he said: "I'm going to take some time to have fun with my young son and daughter (11 and seven) and try to pay some bills."

Capitol Face-Lifting Delicate Job

Architect Lynn Carves a $5 Million Compromise Between the Antique Lovers and Brash Moderns

By DOUGLAS LARSEN
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)—How modern can you make an antique? Kindly give David Lynn, Architect of the Capitol, hopes he finally has the answer.

On one side he's been mercilessly pressured by a crowd whose creed is "Don't plug up a worn hole in your venerable edifice." They would preserve every tobacco stain and spider mark in the Capitol. So what if the roof falls in? It'll make it more historic than ever.

On the other side he's been nagged by the brash moderns who want built-in television lighting, air conditioning with humidity control, comfortable seats, fire-proof walls and collapse-proof roofs.

Since long before the war Lynn has been pleading with the Congressmen to let him make the Capitol a safer and more comfortable place in which to legislate. The best he could talk them into has been the reinforcement of the roofs and ceilings of the Senate and House chambers with safety steel joists.

But at last they've consented to some improvements. In July, the workmen will be ready to swarm all over the place and try to effect the great compromise between the antique lovers and the moderns which Lynn has worked out. It is planned to do half the job during the summer's recess and the other half next summer.

The cost will be about $5,000,000.

HOUSE CLEANING: Steel beams and squeaky chairs in the midst of which these workmen spruced up the Capitol for 1943 will soon be gone in the first big alteration job since 1930.

Brund new roofs over both the Senate and House are the largest parts of the project. They will replace the sagging skylights which now are the only protection against rain and sun afforded for the legislators' heads. The new roofs will be reinforced concrete. The ceilings will mostly be of large stainless steel plates for the center sections with painted plaster for the sides.

Lynn describes part of it: "In the center of the ceiling will be introduced an ornamental rosette, the field of which will be of curved shatter-proof glass illuminated from above so as to furnish a visible source of direct light. This light is only for the sake of appearance. The actual lighting of the floor will be accomplished by reflected light from the ceiling, the source of which will be light outlets arranged around the perimeter of the core."

For their own reasons the senators have never permitted a public address system to be installed in their chamber. In the remodeling, however, they have permitted Lynn to put in the cables for one in case they change their minds.

Lack of a P.A. system sometimes makes it difficult for persons in the galleries to hear what's going on and for the senators to hear each other. But Lynn hopes that the new acoustical tiles which will be used to line the gallery and chamber, and the new squeakproof seats in the visitors' gallery, will help everyone in hear what is being said on the floor.

The present House amplifying system, it has been said, gives some members headaches after a day of particularly lively debate. The new one will have small loudspeakers concealed behind gridded panels on the walls instead of one big one suspended from the ceiling.

In addition to providing more comfortable seats in the House, the seating arrangement will be improved. Two sides will be eliminated, increasing the number of seats to 468 and bringing the floor arrangement in more direct view of the speaker. Rubber tile will be put under the rugs on the floors and fireproof material will be used in the walls.

Photographers, newsmen and television men have never been allowed to work in the Senate chamber. In the House they have only been let in for special events, which involves a lot of costly, temporary lighting. Lynn says he plans to put in enough fixtures in the House to take care of any extra lighting needed for such occasions.

So far, since the government started building it, the Capitol has cost about $18,000,000. The cornerstone was laid by George Washington in 1793. The Senate wing was completed in 1850, the House wing in 1857. In 1912 the British burned most of it down and by 1919 it was repaired. An arcade and the dome were built in 1857 and in 1867 and 1889 the whole building greatly enlarged.

This summer's work will be the most extensive alteration since that time.

An Editorial By Bruce McNevin or Clayton Hodgson

By next Monday you will have to make up your mind which man you consider to be the better choice—your voting privilege.

If you vote just because your family has for years, don't go any further—take a browse elsewhere. This election offers in this riding two very competent men: Bruce McNevin, Liberal, having served the riding for ten years and Clayton Hodgson, Conservative, for five. The former served from 1935 to 1946 when Liberals held office and Bruce's work is highly spoken of. His greatest accomplishment was attained by his foresight and tenacity in connection with the preparing of the Lindsay Arsenal for war, a year or more before the onslaught and when even members of his own party doubted tolerantly as he kept bringing the matter so seriously before the House that indeed, so skeptical was everyone when Mr. McNevin claimed re-armament progress, that the Post asked permission of the Liberal government to photograph parts of the Arsenal as proof of progress. The results were astounding and ever since, Lindsay Arsenal has been a live of activity. Today it still has a payroll second only possibly to the CNR. In addition to this achievement, post offices have been built and large dams constructed as well as many other projects engineered and completed. But Bruce McNevin is a quiet man from whom you have to drag his highly creditable record of his works. Even last week when he was asked to figure it would take him the lowest early summer water level of Sturgeon Lake and no one had done anything about it, he casually mentioned to the Post that he had had an engineer look at the situation and figured it would take him a little less than a day. All this during one of the worst dry spells that can be remembered. Just these few words and out we went again. And the lake is still rising. That is the Clayton Hodgson?—What have we to say of him. Well, he is a successful lumberman and businessman from Haliburton and that means a great deal. Even Liberals say he has been as ready to help them as Conservatives and he is the kind of man you feel is interested in your welfare. The Post commended him for publishing Pen Pictures of Parliament, because people are entitled to know just what their representatives are doing and he has been very active. However, he has not been as successful as Bruce McNevin in obtaining valuable government projects and having needed improvements made. In fact Mr. McNevin's qualities have gained the ear of the federal government in many ways not only during his years in office but continuously since that time. That is one of the reasons his work is so effective.

So, when you vote next Monday, Clayton Hodgson and Bruce McNevin are good men, who have served well at Ottawa. To us Bruce McNevin would have the edge, especially if Liberals are returned to power.

As a labourer and a native of the County of Haliburton I would like to express my opinion as to the merits of Clayton W. Hodgson, Progressive Conservative candidate, in the election to be held on June 27.

I have known Mr. Hodgson for many years, and have always found him to be an energetic, hard-working man who is happy to call the ordinary labouring class his friends. He has made it his business to regularly inquire as to the conditions existing among the working men in this territory and has pointed out to them that he is always willing and anxious to be of assistance to them in any way possible. He has visited this district at regular intervals and always knows us, regardless of the circumstances under which we may meet.

I am sure that the good people of Haliburton County all feel the same as we at Gooderham do, and are going to work hard for his re-election.

Yours sincerely,

lay. In the cool of the evening the little housewife can stir up her first and second course to fit into her menu for the following day. Often the first course can be used for the second course and the other half for the third. Lemon jelly is a great appetizer and is suitable for fruit, mince and as well as vegetable. For small families, half a package can be used and the other kept for another time. The nice part about jellies is they will keep for several days in the refrigerator and be just as good as the day you made them.

Paul Fabrics
Four of London's top manufacturers of fabrics said the week with the warm weather and held a New York preview of their fall lines. One manufacturer offers a wide selection of suit dresses. The blouses which the softly-faded skirts and look like one-piece dresses when worn together.

Another manufacturer uses the coordinated fabric theme with an interesting result. A gray flannel suit is trimmed with brown braid and topped with a lined coat with repeats a gray and brown, but lightens it with a touch of white. A gray-suey dress is shown with a coat which uses the same cloth, slightly larger, brightly inter-spaced with yellow.

Paced Down Last Year
American Designer Philip Mangone is taking a lot of the blame for this Fall's coat lines. The Mangone collection shown in New York last year still provides plenty of the loose type coats to wear over suits and dresses. But even they have less prestige than most worn last year.

Mangone's fitted, dressy coats are almost pencil slim, and feature near-dolman sleeves, with round, upturned shoulder lines. Some of the coats have beaded backs, beaded skirts, and wide belts to accent the waistline.

The collection has its share of fur-trimmed coats for town and you'll find many trapezoid, broadtail, beaver and black Persian lamb fur.

A delicious milk shake can be made with banana pulp, instead of cream. To fill a tall glass, use one full-cup banana and one cup of cold milk. Peel the banana, add and press through a medium-size sieve, or put into a bowl and blend with an electric mixer or rotary egg beater until it is smooth and creamy. Add milk and beat again.

Some 125 Provincial Police officers now operate on the highways of Ontario and officials feel that the accident toll may reach new badish in view of recent traffic unless drastic action is taken against entering drivers.
The motorcycle patrol will be kept up all summer. (1944)

To the Electors of Victoria, Haliburton and North Ontario:
 R. R. 2, Cameroun, Ont.
 June 21, 1949.

As a farmer and a veteran of the First War I intend supporting Clayton W. Hodgson, Progressive Conservative Candidate, for the following reason:

Some three years ago, due to my war service, my health gave out and I found it very difficult for my family and me to carry on, as farm labour was hard to obtain. On the advice of friends I contacted Mr. C. W. Hodgson and gave him full particulars of my condition. In a very short time I was awarded a pension, which has enabled me and my family to carry on since that time, and which relieved me of a great deal of worry.

I would like to point out that I received this pension entirely through the efforts of Mr. Clayton W. Hodgson, and I have since learned that I am only one of the many that he has helped in the same way.

For this reason I feel that he should be re-elected on June 27 as he has been a hard worker on behalf of all his constituents, regardless of creed or politics.

Yours sincerely,
 GEORGE E. GOODHARD

"New Look" For Crops Today

The Ontario drought appears to be breaking and crops in many parts of Ontario have a new look today. The drought has been so severe that the province has brought some relief to its farmers whose crops lie withered.

And provincial agricultural officials say the drought is now falling.

The week drought damage amounted to some five million dollars a day.

It is felt to have fallen to about one million a day.

But a shortage on still leaves in some districts of southern and southwestern Ontario.

Farmers say crops are only 25 per cent of a normal year's growth.

Across Canada's eastern border, New England's 30-day crop is expected to continue.

Scattered showers throughout the Atlantic region will bring little real relief. Crop damage continues to mount and the forest fire situation is described as "explosive."

A preschool two-story house in Shawville, Quebec, lies in ruins this morning. The fire, which started in a kitchen, killed a mother and her two young children and fatally injured their father.

Fire whirled through the house about 10:30 p.m. and the preschool couple got into a stove.

Mr. Restina refused to fetch a pail of water, slipped and became enveloped in flames. She crawled to the door where her husband chattered, trying to bring him back to his senses.

Australia is getting ready for one of the worst coal strikes in her history.

The coal miners in defiance of the government's appeals are scheduled to down tools today.

Threatening the country's industry into chaos.

It is estimated that by the end of the week 200,000 men will be out of work in New South Wales alone.

Rage industries in the New South Wales and the New South Wales will be brought to a standstill, because of lack of coal, and their workers will be dismissed.

The coal mining union is calling the strike for a 100-hour week and a big increase in wages.

It is a Communist-dominated union.

The New South Wales Government has ordered power restrictions comparable only to those introduced during the worst days of the Pacific war.

At Sydney, with a population of nearly one and a half million, the government is dragging out old rationing regulations.

Electricity will be rationed by the hour, and the government is asking for a 100-hour week and a big increase in wages.

Sydney is likely to go to a 100-hour week and a big increase in wages.

Both the Federal Government and the State Labor Government of New South Wales have clamped down power restrictions in a desperate bid to keep the lights burning for two weeks.

If there's no coal mining by then, the problem becomes, almost hopeless.

Observers believe that the new coal strike and Communist defiance of the British government and its long-agoed supporters.

The observers say that if Prime Minister Winston Churchill does not fight against the Reds, his chances of being elected to power at the end of the year may be very bright.

51 Haircuts Ruled Out

While several barbers in Toronto have proposed that the public pay one dollar for a haircut, the majority has ruled against it.

At a meeting of the Ontario Barbers' Association Monday night, the proposal was discussed and rejected.

But when it came to a vote it was decided that the price should remain at 75 cents for an adult haircut, with kids paying from 40 to 50 cents.

Shaves cost between 35 and 50 cents at present.

The move to raise the price of a haircut to a dollar followed complaints that present prices are too low to meet the overhead.

Barbers say that the cost of a haircut is now more than twice what it was when the price was 75 cents.

Fireman Here 38 Years Recalls Good Old Days

Fireman Jack Graham is retiring next week, after 38 years' service with the London Fire Department, he said this morning.

His official vacation will begin the end of the week when he will celebrate his birthday.

During those 38 years, he recalls as at that time fire horses were still in use. He pointed out the marks on the firehouse walls where the harness for these horses was hung, and explained that the life was hard for the horses' mouths on the harness at the back of the horse, more than the collar, and he said the horses' mouths on the harness were used to pull the fire engine.

He said that the horses' mouths on the harness were used to pull the fire engine.

Father's Day Has Tragic Ending For Lindsay Dad

Father's Day had an unhappy ending for Wiley Bell of Lindsay, Ont., as the day was closing Mr. and Mrs. Bell received the tragic news that their 10-year-old son, Jimmy, had drowned in the waters of Georgian River.

According to first-hand reports, Jimmy had gone swimming shortly after supper with two of his cousins, Gordon and Peter Rick, and Mr. and Mrs. Ted Rick. A short while after taking to the water on an inflated tube, the ill-fated swimmer sank to the bottom, apparently the victim of a cramp. His body was not recovered until two hours later (9 p.m.) by Provincial Constable Caldwell who was participating in directed operations. He had been called to investigate the tragedy along with Provincial Constable York. Arrivals reported was ineffective.

The boys were swimming at a known as Wiley's Landing and the water is fairly deep at this point. The drowning was the first in that part of the river in many years. Access to the swimming hole, a popular one until now with town children, is gained by way of St. Mary's cemetery road.

Among those participating in the dragging operations were Ptes Chief Cliff Campbell, Det. Harrington, Constable McDermott, Wm. Spencey, Geo. Allen, and Stan Shuman.

The dead boy was a bright student, had had recently been advised that he had passed his entrance on the merits of his year's work.

He is survived by an older brother and two sisters.

Haircut Price May Advance

The price of a haircut, like most things, appears to be climbing.

In Toronto, barbers are worried because landlords demand twice as much rent as they paid, a few years ago.

So they plan to raise prices. The average haircut is $1.25. This may rise to 1.50 cents, (UPI).

Advance Poll Opens Here Thursday

If you're a railroadman, commercial traveller, truck or bus driver, stevedore, airplane pilot or an employee of some other specially classified transportation system, then you'll be interested in the Advance Poll which opens today in Lindsay. "The Advance Poll," explains Returning Officer Williams, "is the place provided for people in certain specified categories to vote." The people who are entitled to vote in an Advanced Poll include many of those whose work takes them out of their riding on the day of an election. However, not everyone desiring to do away a election day can take advantage of the Advance Poll and everyone who would vote in this way must satisfy the returning officer that they are qualified to do so.

This being done, the returning officer will issue them with a certificate and they walk across the room and vote in the Advance Poll station provided.

In Lindsay the Advance Poll opens Thursday from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. and continues throughout Friday and Saturday during the same hours. Mr. Williams points out that there is really no inconvenience to the voter because he obtains his

Lake Level Moving Up At Sturgeon

Owners of motorboats on the shores of Sturgeon Lake are beginning to be hopeful that they will be able to start their craft out of the boathouses this season after all.

Day after day the water has been rising inch by inch as predicted by Bruce McEwen, after the federal government engineer as his beliefs inspected the situation at Sturgeon several days ago. Already about the half way mark to normal water has been reached and many new boats, loaded with people could be seen cruising Sturgeon Lake.

When levels drop too far swamps dry out and shadows that minnows' haunt disappear leaving them to larger fish. Frogs are beginning to hoot loudly in the marsh edges again and some fishermen in hundreds of boats will dot the waters in the evening.

First Offense Court Treats Him Leniently

His first offense under the Liquor Control Act brought a 24-year-old Clonnesman man a fairly light penalty in police court Monday morning.

The second charge, that of assaulting a police officer while in pursuit of his duties, was also treated lightly, as the assault was technical.

Another Sign . . .

There's another sign today of the leveling off of prices in the United States.

Some of the reductions are 30 per cent below previous listings. Bigges ones are no suits, mattresses, power tools, paint and refrigerators.

Boy Puzzled By Dad's Action In Sudbury Gun Play

(British United Press)

In Sudbury, Ontario, federal arrangements were made for four men killed in a gun battle with a beer king.

Three police constables and a bystander died of 45-year-old Clarence Brown's barbed bullets in his home Saturday night, and about as anyone in jail.

Death Rides By Night

In the United States, new stories of firestorms and threats of death by night riding rocket warping white clouds and bombs are coming out of Alabama.

A 30-year-old mother kept her story quiet for 17 days. But she spoke today to tell police that she and her 10-year-old daughter were fleeing by a hooded mob, who woman says another daughter, who a rope around her neck, was forced to watch the attack.

Brown's nine year old son, Clarence, says the incident started because of a quarrel between his parents.

He says: "My mother was mad because dad came home late for supper. They often quarrel about his being late for meals."

The led says Brown's brother-in-law became involved in the quarrel and his dad then reached for the gun.

Young Clarence says he was frightened and ran into the next door apartment with his mother and his year old brother, Milton.

He adds: "I don't know what made dad start to shoot. He was a great sportsman, and both Milton and I loved him."

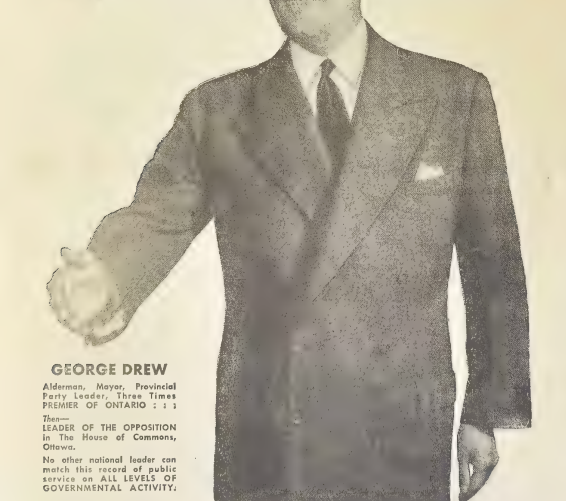

An inquiry will be held into the shootings.

A cooling, after-work swim Friday evening ended fatally for George Clement, 27, an Aldrich Lumber Co. employee, at Wilberforce.

Clement had gone to Dark Lake with a companion for a bath and a swim about 8:30 p.m. The two men had just soaped themselves and when Clement struck out for his swim, he sank and drowned in about 10 feet of water.

He is survived by a sister in Toronto. Coroner Dr. L. E. Carroll and no inquest would be necessary.

A few days ago the Post notified Water Works Superintendent Reynolds and his men working at the park well, replacing a few smaller pipes.

It seems that the town is using a very heavy supply of water, so much so that it will be necessary to use the well if people don't reduce the lawn watering. It was learned that there is no possibility of an actual shortage but the well has a tendency to loosen sediment in mains and plug water meters and this is naturally not desirable. The well water can be filtered by special apparatus or it would be satisfactory mixed at the main water tank.

However at present, Superintendent Reynolds prefers to use the normal filtered river water.

In Ottawa, a University of Chicago astronomer announces the discovery of a new moon in the solar system. He says it's a satellite of the planet Neptune.

The astronomer -- Gerard P. Kuiper -- predicted last May 1 at McDonald Observatory that the newly-discovered moon probably existed.

He confirmed this through studies of spectral photographs.

It is as faint that it probably can be seen even by men through the 200-inch reflecting telescope at Mt. Palomar, Cal.

A name for the new moon will be announced later. (BUP)

Preserving Our Emotional Balance

An expert is a certain kind of work was sent to a certain kind of work. The expert could not understand anyone turning down employment with such high wages.

In a few words the workman said: "I'm not interested in the money, but I'm interested in the work." The expert could not understand anyone turning down employment with such high wages.

Physicians, today know, as never before, that it is disturbing conditions that cause many cases of nervousness, which develop into disease.

One day, it was found that in hundreds of cases of nervousness—being nervous, being nervous, being nervous—no real or organic ailment is present—the soldier, sailor or alumnus of a war.

In an address before the Cooper Union Forum in New York some years ago, the President of the American Medical Association stated that no one is born a neurotic. It is more our surrounding "world" which drives us to neuroses.

A neurosis begins its disturbance in the mind, and it is the mind that is disturbed in the relation of the mind to the world, and it is the mind that is disturbed in the relation of the mind to the world.

How can nervousness, confusion, disturbance, be prevented? The answer is, as it is called, will be accomplished by the various hospitals and welfare work.

In the armed forces it was found that the mind was disturbed much within themselves, not much without them, because of the relation with others, because of the relation with others, because of the relation with others.

Episodes of mental balance and peace are the result of the mind's relation with others, because of the relation with others, because of the relation with others.

All For Chronic Illness
Those of us who are well, even if we possess reasonable sympathy for the sick, cannot grasp what it means to have a chronic ailment of any kind.

It just means, after an almost incessant work, month or even longer, that we "get used" to seeing the patient, and as apparently nothing seems to help him or her we lose interest. Unfortunately, some of us may wonder if the patient could really try more to get well. Thus, those with chronic illness are an unhappy lot.

Just as research workers now are trying to correct defects and treat ailments in elderly men and women, so we who are well must continue to be made useful members of the community, they are made useful members of the community, they are made useful members of the community.

"Facing Death"

It's one thing to learn that death has placed its hand on your shoulder. It's another to accept that fact calmly, tell your friends, what you happen to, and face the fact remaining day unafraid.

It's one story to be told that your hours are numbered and that many of those left to you will be filled with pain. It's another story to tell that your hour has come and that you are ready to go.

It's taken a month for the folks who know and love Poret to get over the shock he handed them. They picked up the Daily Journal and read a story with Warren's byline on it. This is the way it began: "I have cancer and will go to die."

"First," he said, "I feel it will be better to tell you than to let you find out. I am not a coward, but I am not a hero either. I am just a man who is facing death."

Why You Have to Wait for Atomic Power

By S. BYRON HEATH

NEA Staff Correspondent

Chernobyl—NEA—It will be about ten years before the first modern, efficient nuclear power plant can be built. It will be perhaps 20 years before nuclear power could be made available in considerable quantities. These estimates are not much more than educated guesses, take account of only the technical problems involved. They make no assumption whether or not it will be economically desirable to provide nuclear power for general use.

A public relations spokesman for the Atomic Energy Commission's office here, which has charge of atomic power development, says it is "highly unlikely" that such power will be economically practicable, but he adds that the field is not less promising. Warning that for the present we can only guess, most of them believe it is quite possible that nuclear power eventually may be able to compete with the cost of power from coal.

Since nuclear fission produces much heat, and since we know very well how to generate electricity and do other things with heat, why can't we do so with nuclear power?

There are several reasons.

First, because there are no metals or alloys available that can withstand as high a temperature as an efficient power reactor should be permitted to develop. The power plant's efficiency—and perhaps our ability to make nuclear power—depends on the ability to turn as much as possible of the available heat energy into electricity.

So it is necessary to seek alloys, ceramics or other compounds that will stand much higher temperatures than those used in present power plants. The search for such materials is already under way.

There must be found, also, liquids or gases capable of using their unusual temperatures, and limiting their heat loss pressure against the "boiler" of the reactor, and the heat of the radiation energy.

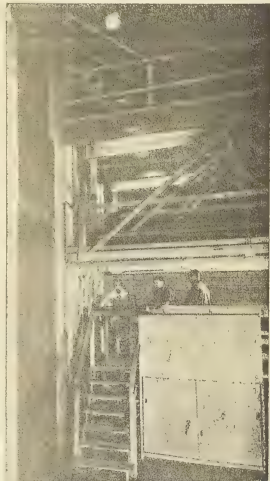

Second, the radiation in a nuclear power plant changes the chemical and physical properties of metals and gases and liquids. Such changes must be found which will transfer the reactor's heat to the engine or turbine, and are not damaged by the radiation released during fission.

Third, there is a mass of other suitable materials, above neutrons and fissioned atoms from the reactor. If these materials were not so strong, it is not possible to slow down or even gradually stop the fissioning neutrons, with control rods, that the action of the heat is kept from reaching dangerous levels.

Materials must be found for the power plant, which absorb as few neutrons as possible. Fourth—suitable materials must be found to serve as moderators, to slow down the neutrons. For this, up to low, cold or heavy water have been used. Some of the materials, however, are hard to work.

Scientists are working on alloys and ceramics, liquid metals and gases, that will withstand neutrons, bombardment and will stand up under very high temperatures. They are considering metals, and from high grade, low-cost ones, but they say they don't know and some that are little known to laymen, including many that are scarce grade, high-cost ore, and expensive and some that are dangerous. Beryllium, which is being tested as a possible moderator, can cause a deadly disease similar to silicon. Zirconium costs $1 a gram, or more than $400 a pound. Cadmium, a possible "coolant" and heat transfer, is very scarce and costs $130 a pound. At the same time, they are on the lookout for materials other than concrete or lead that will stop or absorb neutrons, silica particles, "breeding" in practice. Upon their idea and gamma rays, from which neutrons may depend whether shields can be made to protect those who must be near to react.

Experimental reactors now being built will be used to study the serious problem of fuel supply and fuel power, which may prove to be too great. We do not know whether there is enough uranium to make commercial nuclear power possible. "We think we do know at what cost uranium—our power from it—can be produced. At present prices, nuclear power would have been cheaper than power from coal or oil. The little uranium used then could be gotten anywhere do not dispute Dr. Hahn, but they say they don't know and large use might drive up to low—they don't see how he can.

Beachhead Revisited:

Correspondents Find Allied War Amity Lacking

By BOYD LEWIS
NEA Staff Correspondent

CHEN, France —(NEA)—International amity among the late American, French and British allies appears to be in a pretty rocky state five years after they fought together in the greatest military effort in history.

Evidence to that effect confronted D-Day correspondents within a few hours of their arrival in Normandy in "Operation Beachhead Revisited."

Firstly, the correspondents were dealt a back-handed slap by Field Marshal General Viscount Montgomery, who headed the British invasion force and now is Commander-in-Chief of the Western European Defense Forces.

Learning that Montgomery was in Chen for beachhead anniversary exercises, correspondents deflected the former Eisenhower Naval aide, Captain Harry Butcher, to contact Monty and inform him the D-Day anniversary would like to renew acquaintances.

Butcher's Book — "My Three Years With Eisenhower"—dealt rather frankly with the war-time problems concerning the temperamental Montgomery, and this choice was doubly a bore (French for better or on our part).

It's not known if Montgomery was influenced by Butcher's signature on the review request for an interview, because the rejection was handed through him later to Butcher's emissary, Gail McGowan of the New York Sun — himself — British born — on the Collier-Guard.

French Cool, Monty Colder Five Years After D-Day Began Their Big Push

MONTGOMERY: A back-handed slap

This was the second cold-water of correspondents in the first few hours after landing via American C-47s from London. A little later the group of correspondents leaving the city of Chen were informed by identity Normans they shouldn't be surprised at a generally cold reception by the natives because they still are bitter over destruction.

A Frenchman tried to bring the proprietor of a newly-opened cafe to meet the correspondents, explaining the proprietor had lost both legs in the bombardment. The efforts were unavailing.

The attitude of people in damaged towns was in marked contrast to the friendly attitude of countryfolk who waved and smiled at our caravan of Renaults.

Trying another cafe, correspondents encountered seven British officers. As the British entered, one respondent, smilingly bowed and said: "Welcome to Chen." The Britons laughed uproariously at the sarcasm, which was based on Montgomery's notorious delay in breaking through at Chen during the Normandy Campaign. The delay compelled Americans to alter the battle plan and virtually shoulder Monty forward.

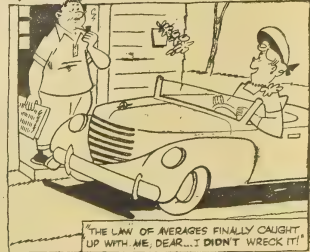

The Britons invited the correspondents to have a round of drinks, and explained there, too, were having difficulties on D-Day plus five. In France for military exercises, they are unable to practice beach landings because the French won't permit it.

It seems to have been a long five years since the Americans, British and French fought together.

SE in College, Pa —(NEA)—There are more than one way of working your way through college, and a 25-year-old father who has found a new way to do it.

Harry J. Moore, of Philadelphia, enrollment at Pennsylvania State College here, didn't just come up with a plan which permits him to go on flying and still earn his degree.

When the good weather comes Moore flies a plane to the campus and each weekend takes off on a spraying assignment. His assignment may take him anywhere from South Carolina to New England, but he never fails to report for classes Monday morning.

In addition, the weekly citrus fields, potato fields, hops and sometimes citrus. It's no danger.

But "people think it is," he says. "It's really a summer job," Moore says, "but I begin earlier because the spraying season begins before school ends."

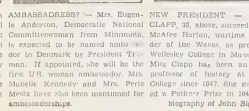

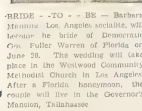

HARRY J. MOORE: You are the country, too.

At Penn State, Moore is studying forestry. He hopes to make in entomology and he sees possibilities of combining his spraying activities with his forestry career.

The jovial Navy flier tried cross-country running at Penn State, but gave up the sport when his spraying job took him cross-country as he always has to effort to himself.

"It's easier to see the country this way," he smiles.

 Strawberries are definitely going to be scarce they tell us and this means that housewives will have to do a little substituting to make the berries go farther. Don't overlook rhubarb and pineapple to help make your strawberry jam a long way. You'll find rhubarb in your cook books or commercial points pamphlets to give you the exact proportions. Neither fruit detracts from the flavor of the berries but adds something to it. The same with canned strawberries. The fresh rhubarb and it will make delicious pies in the winter as well as fruit.

 Three cups of dried, cooked potatoes; six ounces of finely-cracked cheese; three tablespoons of fat; three tablespoons of sifted flour; one and one-fourth teaspoons of salt; one and one-half cups of hot milk; three eggs, well beaten; one-fourth cup of fine dry bread crumbs coated with white fat.
 Mix the potato and cheese. Place in a baking pan.
 Now comes the white sauce. Add here's how that's done. Melt the fat, mix together with flour, salt and mustard. Blend with fat and add to milk. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Cool.
 Pour the sauce over the potatoes and cheese, spread evenly, sprinkle crumbs on top, and bake in a moderate oven, about 35 degrees for 30 minutes.

Herlihey Double Winner Lindsay Boxing Show

The fans were treated to some very good boxing bouts at the arena on Friday, when Vic Barnato brought some top fighters to Lindsay. Among them were Morris Mann, the British Empire Champion of 14 lbs. Class from Scotland, Dave Harp from Toronto a ring down if every other was, Dick Wilson a very clever boy from Toronto, and Rudy Carriage from Pelee.

The card featured one knockout, two draws, and some very close decisions.

Mike Herlihey of Downsview won the 108 lb. Championship of Lindsay, when he defeated Bill Ford in a close issue and then came back later to take another shot from hard-hitting Cliff Wilkison.

In the preliminary bout at 65 lbs. Pearson beat Gault, in a three round bout which was outstanding for pe, ween. They battled each other for the whole fight.

In the Second Preliminary, Jack Sprott and Lockwood fought at 65 lbs. Sprott proved too much for the plucky young Lockwood, and he went down twice in the second round, before he went down for keeps in the third round with only nine seconds to go.

Edna Wilkison, Lindsay and Gerry Ferguson fought at 126 lbs. They battled pretty much even throughout the bout, neither getting in too many hard punches. Each was wary of the other, and they were content to box, and not take too many chances. The fight was a draw.

Miss Herlihey, Downsview, and Bill Ford of Lindsay fought in the final to the Lindsay Championship for the 108 lb. In a fight which was packed with dynamite from start to finish, as both boys faced each other around the ring for three rounds. The crowd were continuously on their feet howling as they booed each other. Herlihey was awarded a split decision.

At 160 lbs. of Toronto, and Don Corbett of Hamilton met at 123 lbs. They boxed very cleverly, with neither being able to solve the others defence, and they mostly resorted to in fighting. Hamilton seemed to have the harder punch, and was somewhat more aggressive. Subbed was awarded a split decision.

Dave Wilson, colored star from Toronto, and Paul Baur from Hamilton boxed at 180 lbs. Wilson scored too close, and kept a left to Baur, five most of the time which prevented him from coming up. Wilson showed by his actions that he is a very clever boy, and would be a hard boy to defeat. He dropped Baur for a nine count in the third round. Wilson won the decision.

Cliff Wilkison, Lindsay, and Mike Herlihey fought for the final in the Middleweight class. The boys started from the very first, and pasted each other all over the ring. The crowd never stopped yelling from the beginning on end. Herlihey used a snapping left to Wilkison's head, and Wilkison, countered with an overhead right to Herlihey's face. Both boys gave everything they had, and put on a wonderful fight. At the end both boys were weary. Herlihey took the fight on a split decision.

Dave Morris of Toronto, and Dave Cooke of Ottawa boxed at 147 lbs. Morris is quite a showman, and he amused the fans with his many antics. Morris took the fight by a split decision.

Primeau Turns Down Offer

Former Toronto Maple Leaf hockey star, Joe Primeau has turned down an offer to coach the Boston Bruins.

Primeau has given business obligations as his reason for rejecting the offer.

The centre star of the N.H.L.'s famous kid line of the early 1930's had been offered the Bruins job back in April following the resignation of Doc Clapper. (BUP.)

from Scotland, and Bruce Deason of Peoria, fought at 118 lbs. The boys put on a very good boxing bout. The five rounds Deason seemed a hard hitter but he, tired in the fourth, Mair was very aggressive, getting the fight, and pace, and finished like a whirlwind to take the decision.

The final was a five round bout by Rudy Carriage of Pelee and Art Taylor of Toronto. Taylor is a sharp hitting boy with a good left hand. Rudy was more of an in-fighter, and he seemed to have difficulty solving Taylor's defence. However, when he did get in he landed hard rights and lefts to Taylor's midsection. The fight was full of action and both boys showed lots of action.

The fight was called a draw. Matchmaker: Vic Bagnato, Toronto, and Lesie Waxman.

Referee: Jacky Duggan, Pelee, Bruce, Lindsay.

Balloon Barrage Beckons Voters

"Vote-Vit" balloons numbering 10,000 were circulated in the downtown area of Montreal as the Young Men's Section, Montreal Board of Trade, pointed its "Vote-Vit" campaign to stimulate the heaviest possible turnout of voters in Monday's election. The balloons, clearly marked with the "Vote-Vit" slogan, were handed out sparingly on the busiest streets in the city. Photo shows MISS CLARE GOSWORTHY, Young Men's Section secretary, suffocated by the balloons on the Board of Trade building just after they had been inflated.

REVENUE DROP LESS THAN REPORTED

Lindsay, Friday—You need the story about parking meter collections yesterday and are thinking this is the phase of the town's business is going to the dogs, relax—it isn't as bad as you think. In fact, while the meters in their second full year of operation brought in less money in their first year, there are signs that this year may be better.

The comparative figures given in yesterday's Post were a little confusing all because of the fact that one total, covering 13 months operation, was compared with another representing only 12 months operation. Yesterday's report said that in the second year of the meters' operation was not as bad as it looked. Actual revenue in revenue from this source for the second 13-month period of their operation was $882. Yesterday's report said it was $1300 but this figure was one month's revenue only, the first they were given.

Now for a look at this year's figures for the first five months as compared with the first five months of last year. This is a better picture because it records an increase. Total receipts to June 1st, 1946, totaled $6,370 whereas last year's receipts to June 1st, this year totaled $4,550—so an increase of $1,820.

Ralph H. Lawler, parking meter supervisor, says the revenue from Lindsay's meter company, favorable to that of other towns, is the number of meters. Mr. Lawler has been in charge of the meters here since the first of the year and is in this period that the upswing in revenue has been noted.

FIND DOBBIN MASQUERADING AS RESTAURANT HAMBURGER

A row by any other name may smell as sweet. But—like Gertrude Stein's Rose—here is a horse—and not a hamburger.

And that's what has Portland, Oregon, officials worried this morning.

As a result, they've called on the U.S. Government to step in to make sure that no more refugees from the factories find themselves trans-ferred from a racing form to a dinner menu.

City officials report that they've found plenty of evidence showing that Dobbin has turned up in more than one restaurant masquerading as a hamburger. And they say 14 people already have been charged with trying to pass off hamburgers in disguise on the public.

A city commissioner has asked the bureau of police industries to supply Federal Inspectors at all meat plants which furnish meat for Portlanders. But the bureau says it may take time to decide.

It's the first time the bureau has had such a request.

In the meantime, Portlanders will have to wonder whether their last bite was delicious or just a tainted roll. (BUP.)

NOT MUCH TO COME HOME TO

Reporters have finally caught up with the bridge-woman Governor Fuller Warren of Florida, and the first thing he was asked to tell was his wife to go home to the "pretty steady" Governor's mansion in Florida.

In Los Angeles, Warren has been playing hide-and-seek under the name of "Smith," trying to fool streamers trailing him for some talk about his Sunday marriage to 24-year-old Barbara Barnes Manning.

Warren made no bones about his fly, wedding bells, he said, were being said with of his own pocket just with any help from the Florida Legislature. Says Warren: "Thirty-five million dollars short anyway!" and he says the shortage don't help the governor's housing problem much.

That's the report of democratic Congressmen who visited Truman today. The Senators and representatives asked him to support their anti-union bill.

A delegation spokesman—Democratic Senator James Murray of Montana—says Truman didn't commit himself. But Murray says Truman meant with his visitors that something must be done to halt the growing joblessness.

The people of Muskogee, Michigan, for example, say the sooner the better. They need one such case desperately. The city of 28,000 has been hit by the changing economic times. About 13,000 people are out of work every four able to work—out looking for a job. More than one-fourth families are on relief.

Eighty-five, hundred persons are drawing unemployment benefits. Muskogee was a boom town. Thousands of workers poured in during the war to help out in the production battle against the Axis. There were jobs aplenty for several months. Now things are settling down, normal, —and there isn't enough work to go around.

CSU Strike

Partially Settled

British United Press—There is a partial settlement of the Canadian Seafarers' strike, ships tied up in London, England, are once more being handled by dockworkers who had handed them in sympathy with the CSU men.

The settlement in England was negotiated by Denis Wilgan, Canadian High Commissioner in London.

Bill Aird, the Canadian strike leader, there, says the agreement calls for:

1. No reprisals.

2. All charges, including mutiny, against striking crews to be dropped.

3. Crews are to work at the same wage under the same conditions as before the strike.

4. All are to go back to work as members of the Canadian Seafarers' Union, which called the strike.

5. There will be no pressure upon strikers to join the rival Seafarers' Union.

Here in Canada, the President of the CSU Harry Davies' for his settlement is "a partial victory" for his side.

He says the ship affected are the freighters Beaverette and the Argonaut—held up in a New York "tidal" —held up in a New Zealand port.

Canadian Pacific Steamships—owners of the Beaverette—say the ship will still work with the original CSU crew.

The partial settlement does not apply to ships on the Canadian coast.

Canada Can't Fill British Bacon Order

One of Canada's food controls which Britain is relying on heavily.

In Ottawa, Agriculture Department officials say bacon exports to Britain will get worse.

They say Canada probably won't be able to deliver more than 100 million pounds of bacon to Britain this year.

The Anglo-Canadian contract calls for 140 million pounds. (BUP.)

Coldwell Sees Depression On Horizon

Socialist leader M. J. Coldwell believes Canada is heading for a depression... and he thinks it's coming soon.

"The depression is on the horizon. Neither the Liberals, nor the Conservatives could cope with it," he said.

He says wheat records will fall in price in one day in Chicago. (BUP.)

School's Out—the Sky's the Limit

Books in the air and with whips of delight, their youngsters try the joy of thousands of their fellow schoolchildren on the occasion of school closings and the anticipation of a wonderful summer holiday. On, to be young again.

They know the object of the game on strike in Portugal, England, to protest against being called "hired money."

They say the comparison was made by the conservative Robert Mack. And they refuse to accept in an amusement park show for which they have been booked, until Mack appears.

Mack says the whole thing was a terrible mistake "as, in the week's council meeting," he said, "I said I thought the night show would be at the far end of the midway with all the other amusements." He added: "I mentioned so-called monkeys and so on... but was not referring to them people personally."

WHAT A SHOT! Sixty-four-year-old H. B. Perkins of Birmingham, Alabama, is one of those who decided to do something about the beat.

Perkins took off his pants and strolled into a hotel lobby in his underwear. He explained: "It was a joke. I just had to cut off. Police locked him in the cooler."

More Cheese Made in May

The Canning Commission of Agriculture says that cheddar cheese production in the province increased during May.

Cheese factories reported a total output of 11 million 11 hundred pounds of cheddar, an increase of 37 percent over May 1945. However, creamery butter production remained about the same. Stocks have increased with seven million 170-th in April of this year.

Whole-sale butter prices were down to 8 cents per pound from the 66 cents which was reported in May of 1946. (BUP.)

SUN METER

Science has the answer for sun batters who want a tan, but don't want to use the old fish and milk method.

To prevent the beach-goer from coming home with a bad case of sun burn, science has produced a sun-burn meter. A dial on the meter shows how many minutes the sun will give you shade of tan.

The device is being shown at the annual American Institute of Electrical Engineers at Swampscott, Massachusetts. (BUP.)

Arrest Of Archbishop Almost Sure

(British United Press) Rumors are spreading in Czechoslovakia of police action against Catholic clergymen.

The rumors started following publication in a communist-controlled newspaper of a report that Czech police were moving against clergymen accused of trying to foment disorder in parts of Slovakia. The Czech newspaper says the Slovak government may yesterday and heard a report by the committee of the Interior.

The newspaper says: "The Communists have taken certain measures according to the Government's declaration of June 21. It is not yet what the measures were."

On June 21 Premier Anton Zapadla said that police action against Archbishop Josef Beran. He said that "law and justice must be" and said that "the government will not tolerate church officials who are engaged in political agitation for patriotic Catholic priests."

The inference from today's Communist newspaper report is that the government has begun to act.

Full Tariff On Japanese Knits Aided

Toronto, June 24 (BUP) The Canadian Woolens and Knit Goods Manufacturers Association has announced that Canadian Manufacturers have appealed the Canadian Tariff Board's decision covering duties on Japanese knitted gloves and mitts.

The board reduced value for duties fixed by the Minister of National Revenue. The Woolen Association says that Canadian Manufacturers are of the opinion that production and employment will suffer because of cheaply-produced imports from Japan. The Association says it has written to the Minister of National Revenue.

New Remand In C.P.R. Break-In

Parole Board's remand until July 16 was granted at the request of the counsel for the defence, in the case of the second of the two men accused in the Fennell Falls and Burn River C. P. R. break-ins which occurred two months ago.

Reason for remand is that the accused is unable to give a satisfactory account of the break-in which he was charged with.

The dead woman was thrown clear of the wreck and her body was found near the railway tracks north of the intersection. Her remains are being held at the Lindsay Police Station.

It is reported that the dead girl was acting as a model for Mr. Davies, a dress manufacturer's representative. She was taken in Lindsay this morning and was on their way to Peterborough.

Shed marks on the highway showed that Davies made a desperate attempt to bring his car to a stop before it struck the train.

1,500 Priests Disappear

THIRILL OF A LIFETIME — a group of orphans gets a thrill of a lifetime going down the S. Lawrence in a real ship. The nun who accompanied the kids on the cruise is getting a big kick out of proceedings.

Volcan sources say more than 1,500 Catholic Priests have been arrested or have disappeared in Soviet-dominated Eastern Europe, since the end of the war.

These sources say an undetermined number of priests have been executed. The rest have been either imprisoned, deported or just vanished.

A Vatican spokesman says the campaign against Czech Archbishop Josef Beran is only the latest chapter in a long series of anti-church persecutions behind the Iron Curtain.

He says the church has been stripped of most of its authority in Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Albania, Poland, Romania, Yugoslavia, and the Baltic States.

Volcan sources say three of Atlantic's six bishops have been executed. The other three are in jail under death sentences. In other Communist-dominated countries church authorities are known to be in prison. Others have been deported. Only a few are said to be carrying out their ministries.

Sets 5 Fires To Tune Of $50,000

Provincial police in British Columbia are searching for a firebug, who went on a rampage of incendiaries over the weekend.

The firebug used "Molotov cocktails" to start five fires within half an hour in the four farming area of Kelowna.

Danney is estimated at nearly 40-thousand dollars.

The Roman Catholic Church at Bulkley, British Columbia, was burned causing 10-thousand dollars' damage. The municipal office at nearby Glenora was next, followed by three buildings in the town.

Police say the firebug used "Molotov Cocktails" — a wartime home-made bomb introduced by guerrilla fighters. The "cocktail" consists of a large beer bottle filled with coal oil with protruding fuse.

This is the second wave of incendiaries or waves through the area in less than a year. Last October, five buildings were set on fire in less than three hours.

Denied a Vote On Technically

Late Current News (77 NUP) External Affairs Minister Lester B. Pearson was unable to vote in his riding today — on a technicality.

Laboral sources in Little Current, Ontario say that the External Affairs Minister was turned back in the house because his name was not on the voters list. He was not a resident when the list was made up.

Pearson was the sitting member for Altona, Albert and is liberal candidate in today's election. But the Dominion Government, realizing regulations that the voter must be a resident in his riding when the elector's list is made out, Pearson was campaigning out of town at that time.

It's the Heat —

Toronto police say that excess heat of the weekend is responsible for an exceptionally large number of arrests on drunk charges. There are 80 persons believed to have landed in the jail in the past 48 hours and have been confined to the str.

WHERE DOES DEMOCRACY BEGIN AND WHERE DOES IT END

Every once in a while, usually after we've been hearing a lot about the democratic principles of the American people, something comes along which throws a bit of cold water on our enthusiasm. One such incident is recorded in a British United Press dispatch which flowed over the wires on Tuesday. It reads:

"A 25-year old American Negro student opened the University of Oklahoma to his race by beginning her law studies but she had to sit in a partitioned section of a classroom."

Mrs. Adalzo Fisher started her battle for admission in January, 1946. Her struggle has partially created Oklahoma's segregation laws . . . but partially.

"Mrs. Fisher is separated from her white classmates by a railing. She must also eat away from them . . . use a separate washroom . . . and study in a special section of the university library."

Such things as this tend to reflect badly on a self-styled democratic nation and always make one wonder where democracy begins and where it ends. A true democracy, it would seem, should make every effort to have such out-moded laws as the one referred to in the foregoing story scrapped. They serve no purpose except to perpetuate a minority race prejudice which augurs badly for a democratic people.

DON'T FAIL TO TACKLE IT UP . . .

Ontario's Minister of Highways, Hon. G. Duceppe, has just authorized release of a very useful, safely versus side of the folder is a notice which the minister has requested children to place inside the screen door which they use most—just above the door handle. The notice, printed in bold type reads: Stop at the curb . . . Look both ways . . . Wait until it's safe, then Walk across the street.

In a personalized notice which is signed by the minister and the purpose of the folder, Mr. Duceppe writes as follows:

"You will soon finish school for this year and go on your summer holidays.

There is one thing you can do that will help make this to be a happy holiday. BE CAREFUL whenever you are near motor cars and cars.

The summer is always a bad time for accidents.

Please . . .

Play in safe places.

Walk on the left side of the road.

(If there is no footpath).

Avoid stepping out from near parked cars and trucks.

Stop, Look and Wait before crossing streets.

Cross only at intersections and walk across, don't run.

To help you remember how to play, walk and ride safely this summer, we are sending you this little folder.

Please read it. Then put it somewhere where you will see it often."

Parents would be doing their children a favor if they made sure that the notice is tucked up as recommended.

TOO MUCH COMPETITIVENESS IS NOT GOOD

Now that examination time has rolled around in schools across Ontario, numerous cases flooding back of our own days in school. Our thoughts go back to the competitive atmosphere which prevailed in the class room of those days—everyone striving to do just a little better than the other fellow. The result was that by the time examinations rolled around a lot of pupils were down to a frazzle through over-concentration on pre-exam studying and often didn't make as good a showing in the final analysis as those who made less preparation.

This spirit of competitiveness in school work can be carried too far and is a thing which should not be encouraged in any degree. The only thing any pupil should undertake to do is to interest himself in his own success. By proper attention to detail through-

THE FAMOUS C.B.C.

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation owns a network of radio stations across Canada. It also supplies network programs to a number of independent stations. It operates two network programs in English and one in French. It provides some "cultural" sustaining programs.

Although the private stations in Canada are quite prepared to provide radio entertainment and instruction free—securing all their revenue from commercial sponsors—(and do so within their limited fields) the Socialist radio networks take all the commercial revenue they can get and collect $2.50 per annum for each radio set as well, (about $5 million dollars a year) and PAY NO TAXES.

In addition the C.B.C. enjoys the function of policing its competitors. (Can you imagine what the fathers of Democracy would say to THAT?)

Just now the C.B.C. has a hot potato in television. The U.S. has had television for years. There are now sixty television stations and many thousands of sets in use in the United States. There are no stations and only a few hundred sets in Canada. There is only one reason why Canadians can't have television—The C.B.C. Board of Governors are afraid of competition. They feed up pay about the need for waiting until television has got its legs under it in the U.S. so Canadians won't pay bills that will soon become obsolete. How dare they set themselves up as our protector? Hundreds of thousands of Canadians bought radio sets in the early twenties and yet the taxpayers are solets in a few years. The C.B.C. our own business. We don't need any bureaucratic wet nurse to protect our purses—Is Democracy in Canada Doomed?

THE PEOPLE MUST PAY

Elwood Hughes, general manager of the Canadian National Exhibition, seems to be one of those people who imagines that anything paid by the Dominion government is a gift to the people. In explaining to some Toronto officials a proposal to build two fountains and a pond at the C.N.E. grounds, Mr. Hughes said that these projects would cost the taxpayers a cent. The bill was to be paid by the Dominion government, and it would amount to $45,000.

Where does Mr. Hughes think the money is coming from to provide these added refinements for the C.N.E. grounds? Does he think the Dominion government has some mysterious source of supply by which it can spend money without, as Mr. Hughes says, costing the taxpayers a cent? If the Dominion government spends $45,000 on the two fountains and a pond for the C.N.E. then it will be the taxpayers, the payers of Canada will be the people to pay the bill. The money must come from our taxes. There is no other source of Dominion funds.

There are no gifts when it comes to receiving benefits from the government, no matter what or who the recipient may be. Everything that is bought and paid for by the Dominion government, is paid for by the taxpayers, the people of Canada. Mr. Hughes, like many other people in this country, needs to undergo a drastic revision of his thinking.

out the year and with a little brushing up on the turn draws to a close any average student should be able to pass the required tests without undue strain. In other words the only thing any student should be concerned with throughout the term and at examination time is his own ability to succeed. The position they take in the class should not be a worry to them at any time, because as long as they pass their tests with a good margin of safety they will automatically place satisfactorily in the class.

After all is said and done it is the amount of knowledge we absorb that counts in the final analysis, not the standing we held in our class.

TRADE STANDING UP VERY WELL.

TEXTILES HARDEST HIT

The Bank of Montreal's "Business Review" indicates that the sale of the business scene is quiet at the moment, that woolen, textile and knitting firms have felt the pinch the greatest of any Ontario industry in the so-called recession period.

"A number of woolen mills in the Ontario region are due to slackening of orders and some departments of textile and knitting firms are also less active," observes Business Review in its analysis of trade generally.

Lindsay residents know this to be only too true with its two woolen industries operating on a greatly reduced scale and one of its other textile firms starting to curtail hours of work to offset an apparent reduction in trade.

Of the overall Ontario picture Business Review reports:

"Wholesale trade in May, while less brisk than a year ago and with lesser competition being encountered, held up well in most lines. Retail trade was maintained on a scale approximating that of the same period last year, with larger stores making a good showing through promotional sales. Collections are fair to good. Operations of steel mills continue at a high level, but a few iron foundries are on a reduced basis due to a decline in orders for certain lines. Engineering firms have been awarded some large contracts. While agricultural implement manufacturers continue busy, a lessened demand for small tractors has resulted in curtailment of production in this division and a moderate lay-off. The automobile industry is now fully engaged following settlement of the strike in United States plants which temporarily interrupted the flow of essential parts. Furniture factories are on long-term schedules and shoe makers are mostly well engaged."

Act of the Year

Lake Gets Growing Pains

A lake with no name in the cattle country of Western Nebraska made a name for itself this year.

The lake near Antioch began international prominence by doing the unexpected.

After remaining a placid body of water where many ranges cattle drank for more than 50 years, it suddenly began to rise.

Slowly but steadily, at the rate of four or five feet a day, it marched two miles to the ranch doorstep of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Herrick. It spread out over two-thousand acres of rich hay land.

Ranchers at first watched in amazement. Then they began to act. At a week's end, the mystery lake had created more of a furor in the cattle country than the results of the last presidential election.

Everyone had a theory. Shattered in the dispute were the ranchers, the state irrigation experiment, the city of alliance, and possibly the Federal Government.

The ranchers, blamed the rise early on the Federal government. They said the city was dumping processed sewage into Snake Creek and that was increasing the flow of the stream which feeds the ranch lake.

They said also that a deep drain, age ditch built by the Federal government to dry an air base was helping to carry the water overland to the Herrick ranch.

Alliance dissipated any responsibility.

The State Irrigation Department said both parties, probably had caused the rise. The city, it said, in the picture, officials said, was a large underground water supply by record overflow this winter and heavy rainfall this spring.

In any case, irrigation officials don't think they can do anything about it. It's not of their jurisdiction. However, they are reporting their findings to Governor W. P. Murdock.

Meanwhile, 40-year-old Joe Herrick, his wife, their 40-year-old daughter Anna and 40-year-old son, are fighting the rising lake.

They are armed with a gasoline-powered pump which they say they may have the lake under control—if the pump holds out.

The water is seeping under the floor boards of the basementless ranch house. The pump has been going out and on since early in the week.

Around the ranch house is a three-foot-high earth dike. Three Indians helped the Herricks throw up the dam when it appeared lake really was on the march.

"This dike helps, but water seeps through and the pump must be used to keep the floor under the house," the Herricks also say.

The Herricks also say of giving up. Neither does the lake.

For the record:

There's a lot of people hot under the collar during the present heat wave who have no intention of blowing their top.

The gent who is being sought by police across the line for his 50-year marriage must have got past the stage where getting married was grounds for a celebration.

A recent article appearing under our column "Others Say" and captioned "Does Justice Differ in Port Hope from Toronto" omitted the usual credit line. It was taken from the Port Hope Guide and the oversight is regretted.

It is reported that fruit and vegetable growers in Ontario are hopeful that a ban will be maintained on imports of these products from United States in view of the drought which has reduced crop expectations. These growers state quite frankly that they desire to see the price maintained at scarcity levels so they will make as much out of a half a crop as out of a whole crop in normal rainfall years. This is just one way of saying that the consumer must be penalized for the behaviour of the weather and the industry supported at his expense in lean years. Would the fruit and vegetable growers agree to "bonusing" industrial employees during slack periods when their wages are reduced? One would seem as logical as the other.

The election battle waged by Toronto's three daily papers has been most venomous on the part of them all. The great majority of people with whom one talks is of the opinion that they have all suffered in prestige as a result of their desperate political maneuvering.

It was admitted that none of the political candidates to whom credit for bringing the recent beneficial rains to this district. Practically everything else that has happened around Lindsay for the past 30 years was credited to one party or another.

Cadets Are Home From Camp

Veterans of a 10-day training period in Camp Ippawash, 28 soldiers and tanned cadets arrived home Friday by special train. The instructor camp, R. A. O'Connell is remaining at the camp for a second period of 10 days, and will then proceed to Petawawa Military Camp to take his place on the staff of the Cadet Instructor's Camp.

Ippawash camp is for cadets selected from the various Ontario corps, and specializes in general military training, with considerable on sports. Typical camp activities included firing Bren machine gun, instructions on all types of arm, rifle shooting, fieldcraft, swimming and other sports.

In recognition of their affiliation with the local 4th Field Regiment, Lindsay cadets were assigned to "B" Battery, and received additional instruction on various types of equipment used by the RGA. The instructors were also members of this battery, along with Perseus, Paul, Lakefield, Hamilton, Niagara, and other units.

"B" Battery was more than its fair share of prizes awarded to cadets for the amateur concert given on the last night of camp. Winners from the Lindsay Corps were: P. Pothay, J. Lewis, P. Pothay, R. Smith, R. Jewell, J. Trotter, who were awarded prizes as members of the winning football team. A Sinclair won a flashlight as member of the winning volleyball team, and J. Trotter a pack of chocolates as member of the best basketball team. The winning basketball team was the 4th Field Regiment, Lindsay.

Worthy of mention, but in a different class were Rob, Bruce, D. Langley and S. Rickson—who together struck a camp record for days spent in hospital.

"B" Battery was successful in winning the daily pennant (win one of the nine days, thus raising score) in the camp.

More Hard Times For Britons

There may be hard days ahead for many Britons who have had almost 10 years of wartime austerity.

Britain is tottering close to the brink of economic crisis—a crisis that may have serious political results.

Finance Ministers of British Commonwealth countries reportedly have been in London to talk over the dwindling supply of British pounds and dollar reserves.

Britain depends on its supply of American dollars to buy needed food and industrial goods in the United States—those dollars are her economic life blood, and they are earned in part by selling to American markets.

But the British are buying as much as ever in the United States, and are selling less—partly because the high-priced British goods are not competitive in the economy-minded American market.

The result is fewer dollars for the British to purchase the goods they desperately need to survive.

The answer may be for Britain to buy less here. The Labor government may propose that—and it means the postwar life of the average Briton might be even dearer.

Such a situation might compel the government to call a general election this fall.

Toronto Maple Leafs are in third place in the International League today. Last night the Leafs were loose with 15 hits and crushed the Newark Bears 10-3.

The cellar-dwelling Bears could get no place with Oscar Judg's pitching after the first two innings. The Leafs hit safely 15 times during the election night game in Maple Leaf Stadium. The Newark team had eight hits. Both teams had two errors marked against them.

Johnny Weiss collected two hits in the walk-over win for the Leafs. And as did, his team-mates Ed Galloway and Oscar Judg. But they were topped by third baseman Max Gluck, who had three hits, as did Al Grobowski, the Leafs' short stop. Blalock, Boersop, and Glynn had one each.

Last night at the Baseball Stadium the Lindsay Lakeshore dropped a tough one to the Whitby Red Sox in the third of 7-3. McDonald short stop for Whitby was the big man in the game. He had four for four, three doubles, and a triple. Perry Thompson starting pitcher for Lindsay went till the end of the fourth when he gave away to Doug Loucks who finished the game. Neil went the route for Whitby. Thompson gave up 4 runs, 3 walks, and 7 hits. Loucks gave 3 runs, 3 walks, and 5 hits. Neil allowed 3 runs, 3 walks, and 5 hits. Umphs at the plate—Bennett.

He's a couple of the Leafs' top team leaders. But a Toronto player (The Globe and Mail) reports to say that Primeau is in Boston. And circumstances seem to back up the report. In addition, Boston sources are strictly non-committal on the question of whether Primeau will talk over the question tomorrow of Hockey League. (HUP)

Will Atomic Power Ever Fly?

By R. BERTON BEATH
NEA Staff Correspondent
New York — (NEA) — For more than two-and-a-half years, the Franklin D. Roosevelt Atomic Energy Commission has been working at Oak Ridge, on behalf of the Air Force, on a study designed to see if the atom can power airplanes.

It is assumed in the beginning that a nuclear reactor could never be used on any but a very large plane. And because of the danger from radioactivity, in case of a crash, it is assumed for the present that it would be used only for war planes.

Even on land, basic experts are pessimistic. They feel that the chances of success are much less bright in connection with planes than for ships or engineering-wise commercial power.

Their doubts are not concerned mostly with weight and size, though those factors are important. Low temperature experimental reactors, now in existence, weigh several hundred tons each, and those I have seen are as big as small two-story houses—perhaps 30 feet high, 45 to 50 feet long, 20 to 30 feet wide. The general radiation shield on the first reactor is around five feet thick.

But some, at least, believe it will prove possible to bring the weight of a nuclear reactor down to the neighborhood of 50 tons. And the B-36 takes off with 70 tons of fuel for an 8,000 mile trip.

If the reactor could be brought to 50 tons, a B-36 could lift that weight, plus more atom bombs than it can now carry. With a single filling of the smallest amount of fuel, such a plane could go from anywhere in this country to anywhere in the world, drop its bombs and come home—and make several more similar trips before refueling.

The Congressional Aviation Policy Board, a year ago, reported that in the event of war or the threat of war, nuclear power, for aircraft, "would be comparable in significance to the atomic bomb itself."

In a chapter from his book "The Science and Engineering of Nuclear Power," adapted in the February issue of the magazine Nucleonics, Clark Goodman of the U. S. Navy Department of Research Laboratories, further remark made by the Policy Board.

For a range of 15,000 miles—5000 out, 5000 back, 1000 safety margin—the maximum speed for a mass line-engined craft is between 300 and 600 miles an hour, which is too slow for modern warfare. But a nuclear-powered plane would have no reason to economize on fuel by holding down speed. It could use its top cruising speed at all times.

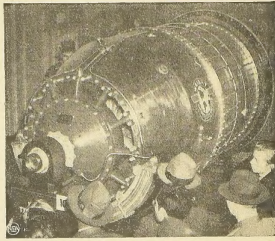

The nuclear-powered plane, carrying atom bombs, "could be the dominant factor in maintaining world peace," the Policy Board reported.

But the obstacles here are even greater than those facing other possible uses of nuclear power.

First—weight is of greater importance. The plane reactor must be smaller and lighter than a submarine could handle. Yet Dr. William E. Shupp, research director of Westinghouse Electric Corp.'s Atomic Power Division, points out that shielding must be even more substantial because the plane's crew must be so close to the reactor.

The intensity of gamma ray and neutron radiation is four times as great at two feet as at 15 feet. And

Use on Planes Seen As Significant As A-Bomb—But Hard to Achieve

IF ATOMIC POWER TAKES TO THE AIR, the first nuclear-powered plane might use a turbine looking more or less like this giant Curtiss-Wright "turbo-prop" engine called the Turboprop. But as soon as materials are found that are capable of withstanding the terrific heat involved, nuclear power planes would more likely be of the ram-jet type.

There is no sea water, outside or in a nuclear plant almost everything would be in one place in the fuselage of 50 tons. And the B-36 takes off with 70 tons of fuel for an 8,000 mile trip.

Second—it may prove desirable to operate the plane reactor at a higher temperature than would be necessary for other types, particularly if the ram-jet proved to be the best method of using nuclear power. That might increase the weight of shielding required. It certainly would increase the temperature that the metals, alloys, ceramics or other compounds would have to withstand. So that even when materials are found that will do for ships, or for general power purposes, they might not be good enough for use in a plane reactor.

Third—the plane, like the submarine, would have to be completely redesigned to carry the concentrated weight of a nuclear power plant. Now gasoline is carried in the wings, engines are out front. With

British Re-inforcements Disembark at Hong Kong

Men of the 1st Battalion, Royal Leicestershire Regiment, disembarked from the British troop ship Empire Hallakade at Hong Kong. They were sent from England to bolster the British forces in the defense of the island against a possible threat by Chinese Communists driving down from the north.
